RESPONSIVE BOLINAS

We are so very thankful that we received such a great response to my writeup printed in last week's Mon., Wed., Fri. Hearsay telling the dates and times of the Winter Faire. So many people came and told me how grateful they were for the reminder about the Faire, and appreciated knowing about the items we had made and were selling. As a result we sold all our blackberry vinegar, 50 cookies, 65 catnip pillows (65 blissed out kittys !), and 15 lavender pillows.

It was a wonderful Faire. There was a feeling of connection and warmth, happiness and sharing, and an appreciation of everyone's handy-work, craftsmanship and creativity. We are so grateful to be part of this Community. Thank You, Bolinas and West Marin shoppers and participants!

Bolinas Community Land Trust's WHO'S WHO
of Board Members

Jeff Manson

In 2006, when, on a whim, I subletted above the Bolinas Book Exchange, I expected to stay a just few months in this mysterious town. I never expected that this would be the place where I would put down roots, stumble into adulthood, meet my wife Vanessa, raise children and discover my life's work.

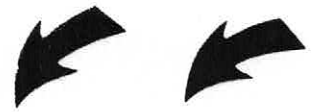

However, despite the odds, that is exactly what has happened. I'm lucky enough to have called Bolinas my full-time home continuously since then. The intergenerational friendships I've developed by having small town adventures adjacent to wide swathes of protected wild land and among cadres of like-minded bohemian eccentrics, have enriched my life beyond belief. It is hard to imagine calling any other place besides Bolinas home.

Unfortunately, over the past decade, I've watched with concern as many friends and longtime community members move away due to the lack of reasonably priced, reliable places to live. I see our housing crisis as the primary challenge facing Bolinas and so, two years ago, when the opportunity arose to join the board of the BCLT, I went for it.

I'm proud to be a part of the BCLT, and hope that our work will help to keep Bolinas the special place we all love.

—Jeff Manson

Film Review by Jenny Riviere

Book Club (2018)

Jane Fonda, Diane Keaton, Candice Bergen, Mary Steenburgen, Andy Garcia, Don Johnson, Craig T Nelson

This film centers around four longtime friends and their regular book club. When one of them introduces a much different type of book, Christian Grey's 50 Shades of Grey, their lives are changed, new romances and old flames returning. Alicia Silverstone has a comeback role as one of Diane Keaton's over protective daughters: Of course Don Johnson's daughter Dakota is the star of the famous Christian Grey films. It's a touching film in that these four pals are like sisters, and they encourage one another to take a plunge, to better their existence.

Comment to Steve O'Neal

Bravo for Researching and finding out the School is hemorrhaging students due to inadequate instruction, administration, and Board. We, indeed, need meetings in both Towns to establish Goals.

The Superintendent let the Board decide and so, we get Art, Music, and Field Trips but very little in Basic Skills! They don't even teach Multiplication Facts. I was appalled as the Title 1 Math Specialist at Tam and STILL am.

We need to move forward for the sake of the young people's futures.

Old News:

Anny Owen, Composer to Watch

Who knew that our immensely talented and hardworking school music teacher is also an emergent and promising composer? I just had the privilege of hearing the score from Act I of Anny's opera-in-progress, "Bach's Daughter", performed at a house concert by piano, woodwind quartet, and string quintet. Wow! Johann Sebastian himself would be impressed with the beauty, creativity, and power of this transcendent work, especially the counterpoint interweaving of melodies that carries one along into the mood and revelation of the story.

The story is in fact Anny's own life story, from her musical upbringing, to capture into an abusive marriage, escape, and ultimate emergence into fulfillment. Personal trauma can indeed inspire great artistry, and I've seldom heard and felt this force so strongly as in Anny's intense and moving music. It's also an important story for our time, highlighting the injustices and perils perpetrated upon women in our culture, and offering hope and courage to those struggling for respect and equality. Still, Anny's son Tony from that marriage got up at the end of the performance and spoke of his father and the need for compassion and forgiveness.

Go have a listen, on <Soundcloud.com> under Anny Densmore, where there are four beautiful excerpts, best heard in the order they appear in the score, namely: "Sisters", then "Winter's End", "Bach's Daughter Mix", and "Motherhood in Peril". If you're as impressed as I am, help bring this important work into full production by contributing at <GoFundMe.com> under "Bach's Daughter". For questions about the work, e-mail Anny's longtime friend who helped her launch this performance: <KimBender7@gmail.com>.
