Great Entertainment

Our own beloved Jerry Bojeste's latest stage creation De-Love-alution is a partly tragic but mostly comic romp/Odyssey with the ill-starred Templesteen family, who have been brought down by Dad's Wall-Street shenanigans but brought together in the end by Love, the universal antidote, in a heartwarming finale. It's great entertainment with an important message for our troubled time.

Opening Night came off without a hitch, weaving smoothly through the many rapid scene, costume, and mood changes, with Omar and Garnett nailing the dramatic sound and lighting effects perfectly on cue. All of this was couched in a lavish set full of bright, bold scenery and props created by Harriet Kossman and helpers. Layered into all this were many beautiful songs written by Amanda Mann and Victoria Hazlett, plus dozens of hilarious lines, word-plays, and body moves.

The cast was exceptional and reminded me of the wealth of local talent we have here. The lead characters were convincing and nuanced, and the supporting cast included a host of colorful characters from goofy to sleazy, whose versatile actors played multiple roles in rapid succession.

I admit to being worried ahead of time about the complexity of this ambitious production. But good old Jerry, with his boundless energy and enduring optimism, pulled it off yet again. I am so grateful to have such great yet budget-wise entertainment offered right down the street.

Don't miss out! Catch it this Friday or Saturday (or both!), 8pm at the BCC.

Real Community Rentals

I've heard the same thing from many local homeowners; "I'd love to put an additional unit up on my property to provide affordable housing for locals but it is just too expensive... complicated... scary... etc." Indeed, the process can be daunting and discouraging, even for those who really want to help.

This Sunday, 3/5, from 1:30-3:30pm at the Firehouse, there will be a free workshop to help local homeowners navigate the process by taking advantage of a new program called Real Community Rentals.

This program is a collaboration between the County of Marin and several West Marin organizations, including our very own BCLT and has been set up to help homeowners apply for low cost loans for rehabilitation of existing properties and provide much needed long-term housing in our community.

Come check it out and show your support!

By attending, you can also help to confirm to Supervisor Rodoni, Carmen Soruco from Marin Housing and others that the Bolinas community is willing and eager to support the Real Community Rentals program.

Sunday, 3/5/17 Bolinas Firehouse, 1:30-3:30pm

Thanks,

Jeff Manson

At odds with the Gospel

As a Christian, I am offended by President Trump's claims of God's support for his agenda, and by his racism and religious/political triumphalism. The heart of the Christian Gospel speaks of a human calling to care for the Earth, bring good news to the poor, help the suffering, strengthen the fainthearted, proclaim release to the captives, recovery of sight to the blind, sanctuary for the abused, healing for the lame and excluded, love of neighbor, provide comfort to those who mourn, support each other, humility and sharing.

The Gospel is also one that affirms God's grace and love that extends beyond political, cultural and religious bounds.

Trump stands for none of that, and if anything stands against it — speaking instead to our love of blustery power, self-adoration, greed and uncritical self-righteousness.

As a Christian, I am embarrassed that one who says he comes from my tradition is so dismissive of those of other religions.

As a public servant, I am offended by the suggestion that my office might be put into the service of political and ideological purposes that contravene my agency's mission, and that do not serve a public good.

When Trump is removed from office for his unbelievably massive failure to comprehend respect for the other, and his ignorance of the sentiments behind, and content of, the U.S. Constitution, I pray we, with the support, inspiration and critique of the disenfranchised and people of other nations, maintain vigilance and persistence in the pursuit of social and ecological justice and well-being.

WOMEN ON THE MOVE :
Women's History Month at the Book Exchange

This month's bookstore walls show an informal exhibit of memorabilia, paintings, posters, and photos by local women who participated in the marches and rallies that took place in January across America.

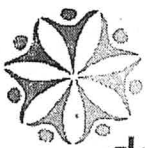

This exhibit is a work in progress, in that the contributions are still coming in, and all are invited to stop by and add your own photos, or put your own words on the walls (via the handy pink post-its), or perhaps to add a favorite picture of a sign or slogan.

The PerSisters, local pink rock band, will play a set of music whose date will be announced later.

Please join us in honoring the women's progressive movement for equal rights in this country. It is unceasing and indivisible. It began with the work of the suffragettes who gained the vote for women, and continues today in the efforts and persistence of the everyday champions who stand up for fair pay, reproductive rights, and the future of their children.

"Screenagers" Film Screening

Friday, March 3, 5:30 PM to 8:30 PM Presented by the West Marin Coalition for Healthy Kids, WMS PTSA & ELAC groups. Are you watching kids scroll through life, with their rapid-fire thumbs and a six-second attention span? Physician and filmmaker Delaney Ruston saw that with her own kids and learned that the average kid spends 6.5 hours a day looking at screens. She wondered about the impact of all this time and about the friction occurring in homes and schools around negotiating screen time—friction she knew all too well. Through poignant, and unexpectedly funny stories, along with surprising insights from authors, psychologists, and brain scientists, SCREENAGERS reveals how tech time impacts kids' development and offers solutions on how adults can empower kids to best navigate the digital world and find balance. For more information call (415) 446-8587.

Artist Reception - Laurie Curtis Saturday,

This is my first show since I was in College and I'm thrilled that the Dance Palace is giving me this opportunity. Most of the pieces I'll be showing are an extension of the painting I do on my pottery - lots of fruits and flowers and few West Marin landscapes. I studied Fine Art at Idyllwild School of the Arts and Design and Architecture at College of Marin. I've also studied fabric design in Berkeley and Interior Design at UC Berkeley Extension in San Francisco. I am Exhibiting Member of ACGA (Associate of Clay and Glass Artists). In my studio in Pt. NORTH DAKOTA

Protesters face deadline to leave oil pipeline camp

By Blake Nicholson

CANNON BALL, N.D. — As dawn breaks over an encampment that was once home to thousands of people protesting the Dakota Access oil pipeline, a few hundred holdouts rise for another day of resistance.

They aren't deterred by the threat of flooding, nor by declarations from state and federal authorities that they must leave by Wednesday or face possible arrest. They're determined to remain and fight a pipeline they maintain threatens the sanctity of the land.

"If we don't stand now, when will we?" said Tiffanie Pieper, of San Diego, who has been in the camp most of the winter.

Protesters have been at the campsite since August to fight the $3.8 billion pipeline that will carry oil from North Dakota through South Dakota and Iowa to a shipping point in Illinois. Energy Transfer Partners in Dallas began work on the last big section of the pipeline this month after the Army gave it permission to lay pipe under a reservoir on the Missouri River. The protest camp is on Army Corp of Engineers land nearby.

The protests have been led by Native American tribes, particularly the Standing Rock Sioux and Cheyenne River Sioux, whose reservation is downstream. They say the pipeline threatens drinking water and cultural sites. ETP disputes that.

Faced with the prospect of spring flooding, some protesters are considering moving to higher ground, though not necessarily off the federal land. Some may move to the Standing Rock Reservation, where the Cheyenne River Sioux is leasing land to provide camping space even though Standing Rock Sioux Chairman Dave Archambault has urged protesters to leave.

"We have the same goals," Cheyenne River Chairman

Harold Frazier said of himself and Archambault. "We don't agree on whether or not the water protectors should be on the ground."

Those urging the protesters to leave say they're concerned about possible flooding in the area as snow melts.

"The purpose of this is to close the land to ensure no one gets harmed," said Corps Capt. Ryan Hightight.

One concern is that floodwaters could wash tons of trash and debris at the encampment into the nearby rivers.

"One of the biggest environmental threats to the Missouri is the camp itself," said North Dakota Gov. Doug Burgum.

Many in camp think authorities are exaggerating the flood threat and trying to turn public sentiment against them.

"They're talking like it will be a flood that will wipe out all of existence," said Luke Black Elk, a Cheyenne River Sioux from South Dakota. Some flooding is likely, he said, but "most of it won't be that bad."

The camp has been the site of numerous and sometimes violent clashes between police and protesters who call themselves "water protectors," with more than 700 arrests. The camp's population has dwindled as the pipeline battle has largely moved into the courts.

Protesters who remain say they're prepared to be arrested, but will remain peaceful.

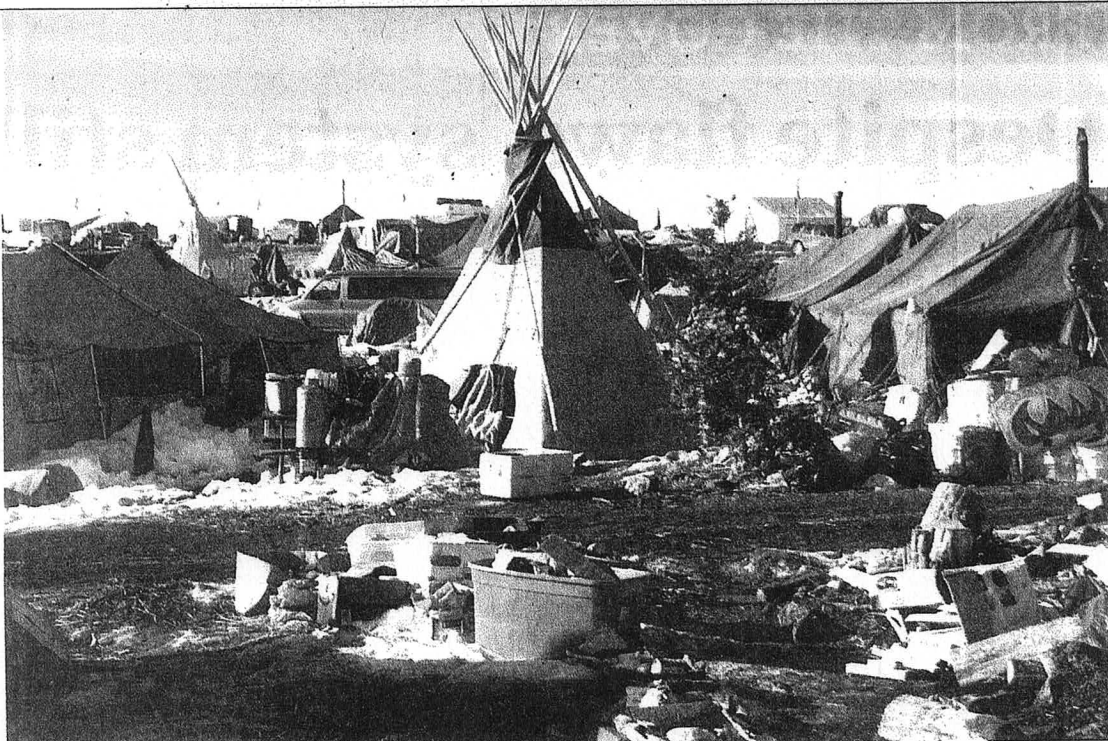

"We'll make it difficult for them to handcuff us, but there will be no forceful opposition," said Bryce Peppard, from Oregon.

Blake Nicholson is an Associated Press writer.
