Let 'em Play!
By Nicolete Hahn Niman

Living and working on a farm these past ten years, I have become increasingly convinced that we modern humans have much to learn from the animals around us — both wild and domesticated. One of the unavoidable lessons of farm life is that young animals play. While our mature cows tend to focus on activities like eating, protecting their young, and grooming, calves spend their time frolicking, chasing one another, and generally testing things out. While the casual observer might consider their activities trivial, by observing them over time one can easily see how play helps prepare animals for later life.

With human children, the importance of play has sometimes been underestimated. Many classrooms for young children have tended to emphasize academic preparation, especially as we've entered the computer age. "All too many of us believe even young children should be working, learning to read, and doing arithmetic, and perhaps a few beginning computer skills," notes Dr. David Elkind, professor emeritus of Child Development at Tufts University. Elkind believes that a young child's most important learning comes instead from "self-created experiences."

Dr. Allison Gopnik, a psychologist at University of California, Berkeley, has spent years researching how play affects learning. She compares children at play to "pint-sized scientists testing theories," and says the best stimulation for learning is for preschoolers pretend, explore, and play.

Nationally recognized Marin County-based child psychologist Dr. Madeleine Levine would likely agree. Levine has written extensively about the problems she encountered in teenage patients who have been pushed too hard and too early. Asked recently how a parent should best discover a child's interests and abilities, Levine answered: "Let them play. That's where they learn about sharing, problem solving, getting along with others, and being creative."

The play-based learning philosophy is warmly embraced by Bolinas's preschool. Laura Di Stasi, the Bolinas Children's Center's head teacher, describes the school's approach as "loosely based" on Reggio Emilia ideas, which originated in post-World War II Italy. Rather than being the targets of instruction, children are considered to have a very active role in their learning. Important parts of the approach include exposing the children to nature, extended outside playtime, and allowing children to follow their own instincts. Di Stasi, who has been involved in preschool education for over three decades, says that it's important for teachers to provide materials and an environment for learning, then "step back and let the children take it from there." Such an approach is sometimes difficult for adults but, Di Stasi believes, is the best way to teach children how to take personal responsibility for the choices they make.

She feels that the Bolinas preschool's space is especially well suited for the school's play-based philosophy. "Movement is so important. Some schools are deliberately set up to restrict it. But I want them to feel they have the freedom to move - both indoors and, especially, outdoors." The school's indoor area has a large, open middle space, surrounded by a half-dozen areas, each dedicated to specific activities. There's an area for puzzles, one for drawing and writing, an area for dramatic play, blocks, one for drawing, writing and other crafts, and another area for truck, trains and cars. A large easel is continually set up, allowing three children to paint alongside one another. Outside, the school has a large grassy yard, sand box, climbing structure, swing-set, vegetable garden, and a track for tricycles and other vehicles. A significant part of every day, except those with very inclement weather, is spent outdoors.

Recently, the school set up its science discovery table with plastic insects. Some children took the bugs outside, giving them histories and adventures. "It has been fascinating to watch them create insect families and story lines," Di Stasi reports. Ultimately, Bolinas Children's Center director Ward Young and teacher Di Stasi believe they are providing children an environment that will not only engage and entertain the children, it will prepare them well for life. "Although it is counter-intuitive, the more children learn from their own play when they are young, the better prepared they are to learn from academic instruction when they are older," Dr. Elkind has concluded.

Saturday May 4, 10am-1pm, Mesa Park
The fabulous, fun, phenomenal Walkathon is back!

Join us in Mesa Park to cheer on the kids as they make their rounds. Indulge in yummy food, win premium prizes in the raffle, listen to live music, and watch the little ones have a blast in the bouncy house. Will there be a cakewalk? Oh yes, definitely :-) –Mette McCall
Calvary Presbyterian Church needs your support!

Our landmark institution, standing at the gateway to our village, offers guidance and support to our community. And now, it needs your help.

For over 140 years this iconic structure has hosted beginnings and endings, meetings and meditations, quietude and assembled voices. Its membership is small but seeks to grow and make a difference.

Members and non-members alike want the building filled with more assemblies, choral rehearsals and activities consistent with church purpose.

We rely on our rental income from the manse (the house next door) to augment our income to pay our bills. As many of you know, our manse has been empty for a few months while we refurbish, but we have run low on resources.

You can help by attending our 11:15 a.m. Sunday spiritual service for a sermon by our pastor Dr. Bob Grove, who never fails to offer inspiration for our everyday lives. Come to our gathering after the service at 12:15 p.m. for fellowship.

Or simply offer what you can:

Have you seen it yet?

Have you had a chance to peek into the Bolinas Community Center and see the amazing set that has been created by our hard working parents for the talent show this weekend?? It’s so cool. We are so lucky to have such talented parents in our midst (some of the helpers don’t even have kids in the middle school yet!). If you haven’t seen it yet, pop in and check it out. It’s fabulous.

If you happened to stop by yesterday afternoon, you likely thought, “oh my goodness! How the heck are they going to get this show off the ground?? What a bunch of unruly, loud, obnoxious parents….”, I mean kids.” But that’s the amazing thing folks; everything looks like crazy, insane chaos right up until literally seconds before the curtain opens and then Voila! the Magic happens.

So, come on down tomorrow evening and behold the spectacularness that is our very talented middle school. They will act, sing, dance and fly into your hearts.

Traveling songstresses are coming to celebrate the Beltane in Bolinas.

Prepare to be awakened to Spring's Song by these three female vocalist/multi-instrumentalist/songstresses who promise to give full heart in this evening of divinely inspired music.

You will experience harmony, collaboration and lyrical storytelling in a whole new way from these precious women of sacred sound.

MaMuse – ("Ma" as in Mamma; "Muse" as in the one who inspires). With deep roots in the folk and gospel traditions, and their hearts in the present, MaMuse (Sarah Nutting and Karisha Longaker) create uplifting music for the next seven generations to thrive on. Interweaving brilliant and haunting harmony with lyrics born of honed emotional intelligence, MaMuse invokes a musical presence that inspires the opening of the heart. Playing a family of varied acoustic instruments including upright bass, guitar, mandolins, ukulele, and flutes; these two powerful women embody a love for all of life. The synergy that is created through this musical connection is palpable and truly moving to witness.

"With the softness of a summer breeze, the warmth of liquid honey, and the joy and color of butterfly wings, MaMuse engage their audience, allowing the spirits of one and all to take flight and soar, as they smile all the while." – Cloud Moss, Kate Wolf Music Festival

Ayla Nereo’s voice hits straight to the heart. With an array of loop-pedals by her side, she layers vocal melodies into majestic, sweeping harmonies and weaves magical threads of guitar, kalimba, piano, and percussion into each live performance. Her lucid storytelling and lyrical imagery are water for the thirsty soul; sounds embodying the many folds of our own selves. Ayla’s music is both timeless and modern; circle songs and roots music meet folktronica. Crafting an immersive soundscape we can rest in, her gentle intention guides us into a more open and receptive state. Each performance is a journey: an inspired, wondrous experience that holds you by the heart and doesn’t let go.

"Can you fall in love with a sound? Can love itself be expressed in sound? Because if so, this is surely that sound..." – Collapse Board

READING TO JOHN

On Tues. 5/7 at 10 am on KWMR (89.9) I'll read the first half of E. M. Forster's "The Machine Stops." This science fiction classic from 1909 still seems amazingly apt, describing a society so removed from the outside world that all their needs met mechanically. (I'll finish up 5/21). I'll also have time for some reviews.

BOLINAS MUSEUM OPENING RECEPTION

New Exhibitions
Saturday May 4 3-5PM

The Bolinas Museum is proud to announce the celebration of its 30th Anniversary year beginning with the opening of the main gallery exhibition Historic Paintings of Coastal Marin inspired by an exhibition presented by Bolinas Memorial Museum in its early years.

The famous artists in the exhibition opening this Saturday, such as Percy Gray, George Demont Orth, Thaddeus and Ludmilla Welch, Ettore Serbaroli among others, were among the artists who flocked to the exciting young city of San Francisco in the late 1880s and all lived in Marin County at some time in their careers and spent time in Bolinas. They strolled along Wharf Road where the schooners docked, visited Nellie Waterhouse's studio (that still stands over Bolinas Lagoon) and painted the area from every angle. They all celebrated light, whether golden glow or muffled by fog, as it played over the landscape.

in the photography gallery: Asia Then: Photography by Alfred Palmer. At age eleven Alfred was hiking in Yosemite with fifteen year-old Ansel Adams. At age nineteen, in 1925, Alfred set out, with his camera, on his first of twenty-three voyages around the world. This exhibition of his vintage prints features images of China and Japan between 1925 and 1947. Palmer's artistic eye captured the world of ancient traditions, with hints of modernization to come. Alfred Palmer (1906-1993) went on to have a remarkable fifty-year career as a photographer and filmmaker. Today his work is in the collection of museums, the Library of Congress and National Archives. Palmer and his wife Alexa spent a great deal of time in Bolinas and Stinson Beach where their son, daughter and several grandchildren lived. This exhibition is courtesy of his daughter Julia Palmer Gennert.

in the Coastal Marin Artists gallery: Patricia Briceno: Dances With Wool. A Bolinas artist, Patricia grew up in the Yucatan where Mayan textiles permeated the culture and inspired her passion for fiber. This exhibition features her skillful felt-making. Felting is an ancient technique used such diverse applications as yurt walls in Mongolia to the seamless felted art clothing that Patricia is known for. But for this exhibition she has created fiber paintings of felted wool, silk, cotton. Baste bamboo, carbonized bamboo, abaca and plant material for coloring. The result is sensual, dramatic and surprising.

"IT'S ALL ENERGY!"
by Vivienne

Put any form — a table, a flower, your body — under a high powered microscope and it'd no longer be form. Just a bunch of wiggly jiggles.

Everything is condensed energy.

By whatever name it’s amazingly creative stuff. All the somethings come out of this nothingness. Beginning with the Big Bang.

And what’s perhaps even more mind boggling is that we have the capacity to manipulate this creative stuff with our consciousness. We can even change form (matter) using our mind (spirit). When we set an intention (focus consciousness) and unite our consciousness with the invisible formless energy of the Universe, magical things happen. Health issues resolve, we become happier and have a sense of wellbeing regardless of the circumstances of our lives. Life becomes a flow-through of impressions, events, feelings and sensations. We let go of resistance and find meaning and opportunity even in the challenges of life that inevitability present themselves.

Modern science is now confirming what masters of consciousness and energy have known for 5000 plus years. We have capacities way beyond our five senses.

This way of living and viewing reality is very different to the culture in which most of us were brought up. Materialism has reigned supreme. An understanding of the physics of "it's all energy" (en = mc2) is now embraced by many spheres of life, but it has only affected part of medicine, mainly diagnostic—X-rays, EEGs, MRIs. Sound (frequency — those wiggly jiggles) is used to break up kidney stones. But in mainstream medicine, serious degenerative diseases (Cancer, Parkinsons, Diabetes) are treated with drugs in an attempt to get rid of the symptoms, with little or no focus on the cause.

The physical is always an expression of the energetic.

The cause of disease and emotional imbalance is a blockage in the flow of energy in the body. The cause of those blockages is stress. Where does the stress come from? Dr. Bruce Lipton (The Biology of Belief) has done research that proves the mind/body connection. Destructive cellular memories and related usually unconscious limiting beliefs are the cause of ongoing stress, which over time will cause the weakest link in the body to finally break and the result is disease.

I have been fortunate enough to have had a glimpse into the way the universe and our bodies work through experience. Four years ago I was introduced to an ancient technology which shows us how to use our minds to connect with the universal energy and transform limiting beliefs and heal the body and emotions. After practicing for several months, my twenty year struggle with Lyme Disease was over; I have none of my old symptoms today.

I am certified to teach this technology, a form of medical qigong that the Chinese government have declared to be the most effective — of all the hundreds of forms. I’ve been teaching for over 3 years, 2 classes a week at my home in Bolinas, Monday mornings (9:30 -11:30) and Thursday afternoons (3 – 5).

We do gentle movements on Mondays and Sound Healing for emotional clearing and balancing on Thursdays (sitting or lying down). All of it is very relaxing, and everything is optional. Ie. You can sit or lie down during Mondays class too. The important thing is to follow the visualizations — that’s what creates the magic — what we are doing with our minds.

If you’d like more information and/or join our sweet qigong family, please call or email me. Vivienne (Verdon-Roe) ps. You can also look up the website of my teacher, Master Mingtong Gu. Chcenter.com. On the home page, at the bottom there’s a video of yours truly talking about the potential for this practice, both individually and for the healing of Mother Earth.
868-2241; yesvivienne@gmail.com

Bolinas Lions Citizens of the Year Award

The Bolinas Lion Club, serving citizens in need from Stinson Beach, Bolinas and Dogtown recently honored individuals for their unconditional contribution to their community with their highest award, The Citizen of the Year Award, also known as the Frank Wells Award. The 2013 recipients wore Serina Basilio-Lewis and Ralph Camiciola, and also honored were the 2012 winners, Bobbi and David Kimball, all from Bolinas. The award began in 2000 to honor Frank Wells, a man of great selfless character that devoted himself to good causes and high principles. After nominations were received from the community, the award winners were voted on and presented their recognitions and honorary plaques at the Bolinas Lion General Meeting. Attendance and excitement at the event was palpable to say the least! Serina Basilio-Lewis is the Founder and coordinator of the program Food For Families, which provides one weekly meal to some 30 families in Bolinas and Stinson Beach. She leads two crews of volunteers, cooks and drivers, who prepare and deliver the meals to a broad range of needy, including new mothers, senior citizens, and people suffering from illness or disability. She began the program two years ago and her team is refered to as the "crew of angels." They gather every Monday at the kitchen of the Coast Cafe in Bolinas through the generous arrangement of a restaurant’s owner, Rosanne LeVoy (also a Bolinas Lion member). Under Serina’s guidance the cooks prepare healthy, mostly organic meals purchased from the Food Bank in San Rafael or donated by local gardeners, merchants and fishermen. Their work is partially supported by private donations, and grants from the Stinson-Bolinas Community Fund. The second 2013 winner was Ralph Camiciola from Bolinas and of whom could be written a book about the amount of time and effort that he has selflessly given to his community for most of his adult life! For the last 20 years he has been giving countless hours to the Bolinas Lagoon Technical Advisory Committee and now serves as the chairman. This is all pro bono work and his passion for the Lagoon is second to none. A former geologist, he also serves as the Bolinas Assistant Fire Chief. The 2013 recipients, Bobbi and David Kimball, were honored for their vision and tireless efforts to help nurture to completion the Bolinas bike path that now runs from the school up to the corner of Mesa Road. Bobbi worked countless hours in planting the border of the path to make it safer and more beautiful. In addition to helping Bobbi, David was also honored for his years of selfless efforts in helping with general business of Bolinas and specifically for leading the Disaster Council). He helped architect and organize, along with fire chief Anita Yvuel-Brown, the Bolinas community into 13 regions, each with a team leader, radio communications, and specific disaster response teams/cleanup. Join us in saluting and applauding all of the winners of this prestigious award. We all thank you.

Bill Burton, Bolinas Lion Club President
