Tom Clark lived, for decades, as his health declined, on a busy street in Berkeley, in a house with many steep stairs. Crossing, haltingly, one of those streets he was struck by a car and killed on August 17.

One of the last times I saw him he made fun of himself for his frailty at having to pause while walking in the neighborhood, and even more when he tried to get to his front door. But, although he could have, he refused to move. His surroundings - mainly an enormous trove of books, magazines, newspapers, and his own voluminous works and manuscripts would have been too hard, and time consuming, to go through alone. And aside from his wife, Angelica, he trusted no one to help.

I asked Tom if he would be interested in being interviewed. We both knew we didn't have forever to think about it (I'm 81; he was 77). My pitch was: "You're probably the least best known person in this country to have written, and published, over 40 books. There's a great diversity in subject and mode in what you've written. And you keep up, obsessively, with the literary and political world around you. Got to be some wisdom to communicate, no?"

Tom was polite, but obviously totally uninterested. He listened to me, and without responding, said he had to go lie down. Some time later, when he hadn't returned, Angelica - who I'd known since their first days together in Bolinas in the late Sixties - came and told me he was asleep, and there was no telling when he'd get up.

We e-mailed occasionally after that, but never saw each other again. I liked him a lot and had always felt a bond with him. In fact, as I write this, I sense how nice it would be to have him here, as we would be watching the A's (to whose fate he was emotionally linked) about to achieve what was thought to be an impossible climb to first place.

As so many of us do - have to do - Tom compartmentalized his mind and soul.

A glimpse at his published oeuvre gives a sense of this. 27 volumes of poetry. Biographies of Damon Runyon, Jack Kerouac, Charles Olson, Robert Creeley. Five novels (including one based on the life and work of Celine). And diverse other tomes (and troves of articles) including books on baseball eccentrics Charley Finley and Mark Fidrych.

Since 2009, he and Angelica produced an astonishing daily blog, "Beyond the Pale," of pictures, poetry and prose, mostly centering on the endless horrors of refugee life in the Middle East, Asia, and Africa. "Beyond the Pale" (archived on the internet) was (and is) worth grazing for the visually gripping photos, and the always apposite words.

I wrote to him about how hard it was, sometimes, to immerse oneself in such intensity, no matter how much one empathized with plight. Amazingly, he called me to talk. After a long litany of health complaints he was tired and had to go. We never discussed the blog. But he did reiterate his gratitude for my Sunday morning classical music radio program, to which he was a devoted (and erudite) listener.

I'm left remembering. Our days in Europe, when he was poetry editor, and I was Paris editor, of the Paris Review.

It's hard for those who weren't alive then to imagine the circumstances of life, especially marginal literary/publishing life. For most of the time, neither Tom nor I had phones. Our addresses - especially his, since I had the tiny one-room magazine office in Paris - changed often. To send manuscripts and proofs back and forth was arduous and slow. When I visited him in Brightlingsea, Essex one time (he was teaching, sort of, in Cambridge) we spent hours comparing life's passages, like our childhood baseball devotions (he had been a hot dog vender in Chicago) and lamenting how difficult it was to follow the White Sox and the Dodgers from our exiles.

The day after he died I'm looking at issues 32-

DESPERATELY NEEDED, CATNIP!!!

For forty years Mary and I have made catnip mice and pillows for our community's cats, and sold them at the Annual Holiday Crafts Faire. Over the years our sources for local catnip have dried up, and this year we hardly have any. We have found (with our own cats) that the catnip grown locally is THE BEST. So if you have any to spare, we would be glad to pay or trade with you. The items made from the catnip are a labor of love, and we get great joy interacting with the children and cat lovers when they stop by our booth to choose one for their cat(s).

37 of the Paris Review, dated Summer/Fall 1964 through Spring 1966 (it was supposed to appear quarterly but never did, due to endless financial crises and the unavailability of its New York boss, George Plimpton.) The poetry includes works by Larry Eigner, Louis Zukovsky, Charles Olson, Robert Bly, Ted Berrigan, Allen Ginsberg, Gary Snyder, Denise Levertov (a rare woman!), Philip Whalen, Ron Padgett, and Aram Saroyan. Clark's wonderful interview with Ginsberg was published (and is still available on-line, blessedly without pay wall!).

Clark remained poetry editor until 1973, when he moved to California for a long – and marginal in every sense – life as a writer, and father.

Every year, a book or two emerged.

We are left with them as his shining legacy.

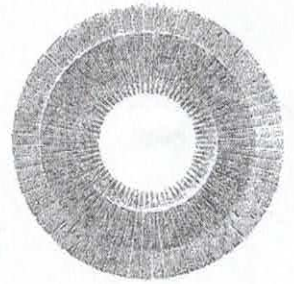

Some of Tom's last words...

When your twittering machine starts feeling kind of neglected... pouting there beside your pillow as though it thinks maybe you don't love it any more... and in the night you hear its familiar call... beckoning... something deep in your heroic teuton outerboroughs bonespurs awakens... as you go into motion your imperial robe pinches a bit... you loosen the belt strap... your twittering machine won't let you rest... tweet with me now, it croons impatiently... your tiny fat fingers do an anxious little jig around it and now you hardly know what you're doing... you're in power glide... then its strange ravening dead bird mouth beak opens and... out comes a sound only other dead birds and Republicans can hear! ☹

EVACUATION DRILL

On Saturday, September 22nd from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. the Bolinas Fire Department and Bolinas Disaster Council will be conducting a VOLUNTARY FIRE EVACUATION drill for the Gridded Mesa.

We will be using AlertMarin to place a call to all landline home numbers with a prerecorded message at approximately 9:30 a.m. Saturday September 22nd. Alert Marin will also send text messages to all registered cell phones. We encourage everyone to participate as the evacuation from the Mesa will likely be the same during a real event.

If you choose to participate, please proceed in your vehicle to the Bolinas Fire Station on Mesa Rd. At the fire station you will find information on emergency preparedness from the Fire Department, Disaster Council, and West Marin CERT. We will also be providing light snacks.

To receive "Alert Marin" texts and find out more about Alert Marin, go to www.AlertMarin.org

While this exercise is focused on the Big Mesa, all citizens of Bolinas are encouraged to stop by the fire station to pick up information about Emergency Preparedness.

During the exercise you will see emergency vehicles moving throughout your neighborhood to simulate an actual response. This is not only great practice for us but it also allows us to familiarize ourselves with your neighborhood and identify potential hazards.

For further information, please go to: www.bolinasfire.org or call the fire station at 868-1566.

Bolinas Community Land Trust's

WHO'S WHO of Board Members

Howard Dillon – BCLT Board Secretary

I have been a resident of Bolinas for 37 years and have been married to Claire Heart since 1991. We bought a home on the Big Mesa in 1994. I've served on the board of the Bolinas Community Center for eight years & was manager there for another five. In addition, I worked at the Bolinas Peoples Store for five years.

I am a classically trained actor originally from Dublin, Eire. My family moved to the south coast of England in 1957, where I was educated & later lived & worked in live theatre in London until Mrs. Thatcher encouraged me to leave the country saying: " We can no longer afford the frivolity of spending on the arts..."

During my time in England I was also part of a small group who turned three streets of abandoned houses in London's East End into a Housing Co-operative, which is still thriving 40 years later. It houses over 200 people in 63 houses.

Since living in Bolinas, theatre has remained a part of my life. I am a frequent participant in local & Bay Area theatre & art events from the Bolinas Chorus to Sheila Lopez, Patrice Daley, Molly Maguire & Jerry BoGeste. Also, many Sun Festivals & Yang Gang celebrations.... In the early Eighties I was part of a local affinity group: Turning Tide, which provided organic food for anti-nuke actions in California and later helped a teenage group to continue protesting as P.I.N.K. (People Infuriated with Nuclear Killing).

Currently I have two Programs on our local Community Radio Station KWMR with friends Mimi Calpestri & Charley Docherty, emphasis on local musicians & events.

I joined the Bolinas Community Land Trust Board to change the current trend away from short-term rentals in town, which are destroying the community & towards creative housing solutions to keep the award-winning school thriving within this vibrant town.

-Howard Dillon

Lots of action at Bo Gas this week! You may have noticed the long-awaited repairs are underway on the sump & risers. This portion of the work should be completed by September 26th. When work is in progress only street side fueling will be available, otherwise fuel service should be uninterrupted.

The gas pump is scheduled for replacement in approximately 7-8 weeks. Just like in any construction job there are many moving parts & things can change, so we greatly appreciate your patience over the last year & through this construction period.

We would also like to extend a sincere thank you to Superior Underground Tank Service, Inc., The Rural Community Assistance Corporation and the County of Marin for their assistance with the completion of this important project.

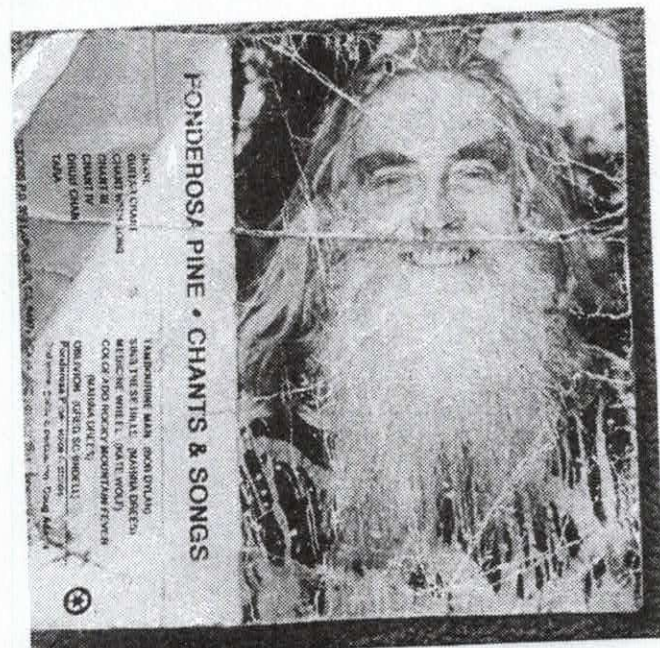

Please contact the BCLT if you have any questions at (415) 868-8880 or info@bolinaslandtrust.org.

HONORING PHIL BUCHANAN

One day someone told me to come down to the bar. All the women were going to be there and I was to take a picture of them. I went and took many photos. Then I saw Phil Buchanan stand on the other side of the street watching. I gave him my camera and jumped into the picture, because I never had any pictures of my life in Bolinas. Phil got everyone's attention while I had just been taking pictures of the group in conversation with each other. I was impressed at how he had taken control of the group, calling out to them and remembered it whenever I had to take pictures of groups later. When I developed the negatives, I liked Phil's picture the best and that's how it became a postcard.

There's a fantastic new exhibit in the history room at the Bolinas Museum, put together by Elia Haworth. The Parkin family operated The Flagstaff Inn, a hotel on the water across from today's museum, from 1888 until it was destroyed by the 1906 earthquake. People would come via boat from San Francisco to stay there.
