

Occupy the Freebox

by StuArt

A few days ago I ran into Tara Thralls in the Freebox. Tara is the "button lady." For years Tara has been making buttons for "leftish" political causes.

"I missed Occupy the Freebox on Saturday because I was making buttons for the event," she told me.

Jennie also was late for Occupy the Freebox, assuming that it was scheduled for Bolinas time. My apologies to those who missed it.

Normally such a happening would take place later than scheduled because this is Bolinas and things take place at a more languid pace than in the big city.

When I arrived at the Freebox there were a bunch of hip young people from SF and Berkeley hanging out in the plaza. When I announced "Occupy the Freebox!" they got right into the spirit.

We occupied for a moment, long enough for a photo op. It was a flash mob, over in a flash.

(For those who missed it, there will be another Occupy the Freebox next Saturday, November 19, at noon.)

After chastising me for punctuality, Tara told me about her experience at Occupy Oakland. She said that there were no leaders so it was difficult to figure out what to do and how to join in.

Instead of leaders Occupy Oakland has committees that assume responsibility for the effective functioning of the encampment.

Tara spoke about the movement's struggle with remaining egalitarian and inclusive.

For more info visit Tara's blog: leftish.tumblr.com.

Why is Unaffordable Housing Sacred?

It's a common misconception that only affordable housing is subsidized. Almost all housing is subsidized, unaffordable housing more than most. Mortgage tax deductions for second and third homes are the tip of the iceberg. The network of, roads, emergency response, policing, garbage pickup and government services that support suburban and exurban ranch houses are subsidized by more densely packed housing. Schools, government buildings, roads, water, sewage, gas and electric power lines were paid for in the last century by public indebtedness.

As they fall apart their replacement costs will prove staggering. Tally the stated costs of the Big Dig for Terrace, then add in the carbon footprint and health injuries from thousands of truck trips to provide access for a few. Ditto the repaving of Highway One around the Lagoon.

The most subsidized houses of all are those owned by the 1% because their ginormous wealth is dependent on this socialized infrastructure, while our bloated military protects their foreign investments and the transportation routes that feed the beast.

The lack of discussion on public subsidies for unaffordable housing breeds contempt for poor people who live in officially subsidized housing. To witness the knee jerk response of "homeowners" (only if they continue paying mortgages, taxes, fees) against affordable housing in their neighborhood. come to the Stinson Affordable Housing meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 15 at 7 pm,

This contempt is epitomized by the Marin Housing Authority evicting Royce McLemore of Marin City for taking in her dying mother. I met Royce twenty years ago, a community activist protesting that the Marin City "improvements", wouldn't help the existing residents. They didn't listen to her because the "authority" favored interests of the developers and "market rate" homeowners over poor residents and her fears came to pass. They killed the best Flea Market in the country and the community funding it generated for chain stores, half empty now.

Since the least subsidized housing is tents, she may have to Occupy Marin City. You may not know Royce McLemore, but if you support basic human decency and equal rights for people who live in officially subsidized housing in Marin please call the Marin County supervisors at 499-7331 and tell them this just ain't right. The supervisors are also the board members of the Housing Authority.

Veterans' Day

by StuArt

I was drafted into the United States Army on February 24, 1969. Up until then I was convinced that the military would not want a hippie art student like myself. But I was wrong. At the induction center in Richmond, Virginia, they laughed at my pathetic attempts to avoid the draft.

"Son," they told me. "You're on the train to Georgia."

Things looked pretty grim after my physical examination. All us draftees were seated in a long line waiting for the next test. I asked the guy next to me to save my seat and got up to take a leak. When I came back my seat was taken.

"Hey, that's my seat." I said to the occupier.

"Tough luck, buddy." the guy growled. "Get to the back of the line."

I was pissed off, but there was nothing I could do, and I went to the end of the line.

Five minutes later, a door opened at the head of the line. A Marine Captain walked out, and started pointing to people in line.

"And you," he pointed to the guy in my chair, "Are now in the Marine Corps." The Marines had been taking a lot of casualties in Vietnam, and they were bolstering their ranks with draftees.

The new recruit broke down in tears.

"This isn't my chair." he sobbed. "It's that guy's at the end of the line." pointing to me.

"Tough luck, buddy." the officer growled and continued picking candidates. By the time he got to the end of the line he had filled his quota.

I marvelled at my luck in having chosen that time to go to the bathroom. Getting drafted into the Army was bad enough, but I had narrowly missed getting drafted into the Marines.

That evening all of us draftees boarded the train to Ft. Benning, Georgia.

My days as a hippie artist were over — or so I thought.

The doings at the Bolinas Community Center for the 60th anniversary starting with the slide show Saturday night at 5:30 with fabulous food to buy and then after pop over to Smileys (really) to hear Beso Negro. Sunday festivities founding families broken and still whole 2pm till 5 sounds like a memorable time in the making Happy 60th BCC.

I want to tell you about the shows at GRO right now On till Dec 11 they are especially fun to see. Betty Woolfolk has out done herself the best ever and hard to describe. I think it is mysterious, surprising and never to be duplicated as only Betty has that mind and heart.

Here are the basics.. Betty Woolfolk VAPORIZATION, The Museum of Curious Thought / Vintage Science Wing The Museum of Curious Thought is an installation of mixed media assemblage sculpture, using recycled materials to create pseudo- scientific museum scenarios. There are some amazing 3 -d books in this show. The "Wilds" of Pt. Reyes; Artists Book Show. These works of art appear in the exhibition and silent auction to benefit GRO's Artists in the School Program.

Madeline Hope offers an altered constricted Running fence part in the annex.

THE LOST CAT

Dog Log

Rolled out of bed.
 Scratched my head.
 Brought the mail.
 Wagged my tail.
 Fetched a stick.
 Learned a trick.
 Chased a hare.
 Sat in a chair.
 Chewed a shoe—
 Table, too.
 Got in a spat
 With a cat.
 Buried a bone.
 Answered the phone.
 Heard a thief.
 Gave him grief.
 Time to creep
 Off to sleep.
