Labor Day Line-up of Music & Food

We have a great line-up of local talent for Labor Day. Here's the schedule of music and food for the event. (The main stage is on Wharf Road and the acoustic stage is in front of the People's Store)

I'll be opening the 2011 Labor Day BBQ & Street Dance at high noon, 12 o'clock and singing the epic "Smiley's Schooner Saloon" which traces the history of Smiley's from 1851 to the present.

Then the fun begins:

- 12:15 - 12:45 Emma Lee with Isabel & Eli (Beam)
(main stage)
- 12:45 - 1pm Jan Broek
(acoustic stage)
- 1:00 - 1:45pm Midnight on the Water
(main stage)
- 1:45 - 2:00pm Winfield & Aboudy
(acoustic stage)
- 2:00 - 2:45pm Just Friends
(main stage)
- 2:45 - 3:00pm Sofi Rox
(acoustic stage)
- 3:00 - 3:45pm Neutrinos
(main stage)
- 3:45 - 4:00pm Anny, Amanda, Bella & Bob
(acoustic stage)
- 4:00 - 4:45pm Bobo Tempo
(main stage)
- 4:45 - 5:15pm Silent Auction Final Bidding
(community center)
- 5:15 - 6pm Mushrooms
(main stage)

That's the musical line-up. Now for the food line-up :
(each plate comes with 2 side orders)

- BBQ Chicken with "Bobolicious" sauce
- Polish sausage on a Sesame Seed Bun
- Veggie burger on a Kaiser Roll
- Tamale w/organic salsa
- Three salads combo
- Kid's hot dog

GLEANINGS Mary Barror

Some of the world's greatest people faced the world's greatest challenges, but they overcame them. Cripple a man, and you have Sir Walter Scott. Lock him in prison, and you have John Bunyan. Raise him in abject poverty, and you have Abraham Lincoln. Subject him to bitter religious prejudice, and you have Benjamin Disraeli. Strike him down with paralysis, and you have Franklin Roosevelt. Have them born black in a society filled with racial discrimination, and you have Booker T. Washington, Harriet Tubman, Marian Anderson and George Washington Carver. Make a man the first child to survive in a poor Italian family of eighteen, and you have Enrico Caruso. Have him born to parents who survived a Nazi concentration camp, paralyze him from the waist down when he's four years old, and you have the incomparable violinist Itzhak Perlman. Call a man a slow learner, mentally challenged, and write him off as uneducable, and you have Albert Einstein. Helen Keller was born blind and deaf, yet she graduated college with highest honors and impacted the world. Margaret Thatcher, England's first and only woman prime minister, lived upstairs over her father's grocery store. For a while her childhood home had no running water and no indoor plumbing. Golda Meir, Israel's first and only woman prime minister, was a divorced grandmother from Milwaukee. What do these people teach us? That success doesn't depend on our circumstances, but on overcoming our circumstances! And with God on our side we can do it!

"The Song of Wandering Aengus":

I went out to the hazel wood,
Because a fire was in my head,
And cut and peeled a hazel wand,
And hooked a berry to a thread.
And when white moths were on the wing
And moth-like stars were flickering out,
I dropped the berry in a stream
And caught a little silver trout.

When I had laid it on the floor
I went to blow the fire aflame,
But something rustled on the floor,
And some one called me by my name.
It had become a glimmering girl
With apple blossom in her hair
Who called me by my name and ran
And faded through the brightening air.

Though I am old with wandering
Through hollow lands and hilly lands,
I will find out where she has gone,
And kiss her lips and take her hands;
And walk among long dappled grass,

And pluck till time and times are done
The silver apples of the moon,
The golden apples of the sun.

WHITE ELEPHANT SILENT AUCTION

There are many ways to participate in Labor Day, but the silent auction is one of those great win win opportunities. The Community Center wins when there are great items to sell, as that helps us support all the wonderful classes and events that happen at the BCC. The donor wins by passing on some artifact that needs to be released back to the community. Something way-to-nice to throw away, but for whatever reason you don't want to sell (too full of memories or not enough time to use it).

The white elephant always reminds me of Ganesha, the Hindu deity that has an elephant head, and multiple arms. Ganesha is the remover of obstacles. So if your stuff is weighing you down, bring the beautiful, useful, desirable items to the Community Center. We'll do our best to find someone who will love them.

— Kathleen O'Neill

P. S. Your donations are tax deductible, we'll be happy to give you a tax receipt.

P. P. S. If you haven't yet met Randy or Lia say hello to these two wonderful ladies who have taken on this heroic task.

Tuesday 18 August 2011

If there's one thing I love, it's garbage. Household rubbish full of shellfish, animal bones and broken, worn out tools. Rooting around like a pig in slop, I am a happy girl when I can indulge myself at a dump. This is how I get my 'groove' on, so to speak. Better than any fruit-studded pudding in London at Christmastime, superior to a bowl of glistening pasta dotted with sweet clams on the Italian Riviera, preferable to bread hot out of a wood-burning oven peppered with Provencal olives, a pile of trash bristling with the bits and pieces of quotidian life makes my brain wobble in ecstasy. Ah, yes, middens, I'm talking about middens here, that old English word used by archaeologists for household rubbish dumps. Forget the golden trinkets of Troy, disremember the epic lost Templar treasure, the details of life at its most poignant, the prehistoric equivalent of the National Enquirer, can be found in ancient debris!

Mind you, I am 'ancient material remains' ethical. I do not poke around established, formalized archaeological sites well-burnished by the feet and thieving hands of a bazillion tourists. Never! Instead, I exploit and pillage by employing a tool accessible to the world and, theoretically, the universe, including the Milky Way, Black Holes and Mars. A tool commonly known as Google Earth. I scan the planet until my eyelids cease to function, my eyes go Bing cherry red and I lose all sense of customary dimension.

Since man has been loping around for over 200,000 years, it is very easy to find traces, old paths, settlement grids and general prehistoric campsites using the all-seeing eye of the satellite (I can even see the pine needles in my swimming pool). With my geographical coordinates, I head for the hills with my rucksack which contains a salami sandwich, a tape measure, a compass (still haven't figured out how to use it) and a dodgy flashlight. Rule of thumb (my own): I do not dig. If prehistoric man - this is my broad term for all humanity from Neolithic man to the Knights Templar - was so irresponsible as to drop his arrowhead on the path or leave his oil lamp in a rocky crevice, then I have every right to chant: finders keepers. . . tra, la, la.

For lovers of ancient trash, Greece, the ultimate dump, is tantamount to a candy emporium with infinite subsidiaries. You find a lump on the beach and marvel at Apollo's big toe; you tie your shoe at the Parthenon and encounter a piece of Plato's coffee cup sticking out of the dust. Better than sugar, the ancient filth enters your bloodstream and induces hallucinations of scantily clad Greek boys, white marble living rooms with fabulous accent columns and sculpture to die for. . . Better than any drug, the discovery of a pottery shard dispels depression, cures Attention Deficit Disorder and shrinks unsightly hemorrhoids. When an ancient settlement appears on my radar screen, I make a beeline for the ubiquitous mound with the telltale seashell bits and prehistoric chicken bone.

While stumbling back from Naxos village to our hotel after a cyclopean meal of Moussaka, Tzatziki, Zucchini Balls, Pasta with Fried Octopus and Roast Chicken with Potatoes, we take a detour and wobble over the rocky beach. With my radar circuitry dialed up to a fevered pitch, I see a terra cotta tidbit sticking out of the cliff. It is an amphora handle mingling with a treasure trove of other Mycenaean kitchen garbage. It is literally falling out of the cliff onto the beach where it easily camouflages itself amongst the modern garbage of ship twine, water bottles and a solitary flipper. With my sister breathing down my neck, I switch into terra cotta junky mode. "What is it?" my sister asks innocently. I mumble incoherently and slip into my abstract cosmic archaic dimension where they wear sandals and speak in hieroglyphics.

My sister is a quick study. She knows a kitchen utensil when she sees one. "Look at this thing," she says and holds up the decorated handle of a large Mycenaean pot, possible Late Helladic 1675 - 1050 BC. I almost pass out, but knowing my sister is rooting in 'my' dump, merely swoon. "Give me that," I grab it out of her hand and gently remove the dirt to reveal the design. I should have remained silent, but like a chicken in a barnyard, I announce the arrival of sustenance. I dutifully hand the piece back to my sister. The damage is done; my sister is mainlining my drug. My eyes go all squinty; hers look like Wile E. Coyote's while riding a stick of dynamite.

Initially, she is Angelina Jolie in Tomb Raider - coiffed, tidy, chic even, prodding in the seaside bank of refuse, but then she goes clandestine. While I hammer away on my computer, she skitters down to the debris pile while the sun slips into the sea. I sniff something in the wind and go to spy on her. She is walking up the path whistling with a chunk of marble statue in her hand like an ice cream cone - the hem of some ancient chick's skirt. 'What the heck!!!'

"You know," I say, "You're going to have to draw the line between weeny pot shards and important museum pieces." "Uh, huh," she says. "I've already had that conversation with myself. 'Self, I said. . . are you willing to go to Greek jail for a Minoan spatula?'" I ask myself if this is sincere introspection. I have created a monster.

Soon, Angelina Jolie changes persona and becomes some gold-crazed character from Treasure of the Sierra Madre. She's covered in dust, her hair is wild as she plucks one thing after another from the ripe soil. Her suitcase must weigh five hundred pounds. I'm gonna have to go find a stinkin' badge.

As I eat my roast chicken leg and ponder who will find it 3000 years from now, I watch my sister trying to shove a marble leg of Poseidon into her carry-on bag. "I don't think you'll get that through security," I say with blasé detachment. "What?" she says with a slightly demented twitch to her eye. "I've never seen a leg on that forbidden items list."

COMING SOON: "DEJA VU" A TRAGIC COMIC MUSICAL REVUE

Three outstanding singers and an excellent band will bring you a feast of music and song when my new musical revue opens two weeks from tonight, Friday, Sept. 16, at the Bolinas Community Center.

The show will also play at the Point Reyes Dance Palace Saturday night, Oct. 1st.

The singers are all seasoned professionals from the world of Bay Area musical shows and/or opera --Rana Kangas-Kent, Matt Kizer, and Ellen St. Thomas.

The band is comprised of first-rate jazz musicians: pianist Dan Zelman, who teaches master classes at the Jazz School in Berkeley; Carla Kaufman, a bass player who is so much in demand that she gigs almost every night; and our own superb Michael Pinkham on drums.

The show--DEJA VU (So What's New?), A Tragic/Comic Musical Revue --is a very diverse mix of entertainments, serious and comic.

There are love songs, songs ridiculing love, social satire, passionate political songs, and goofy songs. I join the band on clarinet in a quartet piece that melds jazz and classical styles. And a fine classical pianist, Fred Adler, joins me in some poetry set to music--poems that dramatize romance and war and much else.

I wrote it all, so I'm not supposed to say how good it is.

But I will say that people loved my previous shows.

And I will say--being well into the rehearsal process--that these singers and players I've hired are so good they're a joy to work with.

Upcoming Tree Work

We have recently obtained Coastal, Design Review and Building Permits to begin work on the Bolinas Downtown Park. One of the first things we will be doing as described in our permits is removing or pollarding the remaining eucalyptus trees on the park hillside. As part of the permit process, we were required to submit an arborist's report. The report, produced by Moritz Arboricultural Consulting, suggests that the eucalyptus trees on the park property, because of their height and subject to winds, are a destabilizing effect on the hillside. The report recommends that the eucalyptus trees be removed from the hillside and that the trees directly below Altura Avenue be pollarded with the stump sprouts to be maintained at no higher than 20' until new oak trees are planted and sufficiently established. By following these recommended stages, we intend to minimize the impact of this requirement mandated in the Conditions of Approval of our Coastal Permit.

We will be hiring the Oakanders to perform the work that should begin within the next couple of weeks. We hope to do this in a manner that is not an inconvenience to our neighbors.

Thank you for your understanding.

The Bolinas Museum Annual Art Auction

Preparations are bubbling for the 19th annual Bolinas Museum art auction and party. "This auction is our biggest fundraiser", explains Executive Director Vandy Seeburg, "the proceeds benefit the Museum's programs of exhibitions in our five galleries and events offered to everyone free of charge. That includes 18 new exhibitions a year, also changing selections from the Permanent Collection, special history exhibitions and many free events and concerts in the courtyard." Bolinas Museum presents widely diverse exhibitions, including, in recent years, contemporary Native American art, 8 solo exhibitions by established Coastal Marin artists, an astonishing Origami exhibition, West African culture, women artists from India, and the H2O exhibition that combined international luminaries Andy Goldsworthy and Richard Misrach with local artists. Opening this Oct 1st is the exhibition Coastal Californios: Spanish Life in West Marin 1776- 1876, curated by Dewey Livingston. So far, in the 21st Century, the museum's gallery reserved for Coastal Marin artists has presented 103 solo exhibitions and another 80 local artists in group exhibitions. The photography gallery has showcased over 60 fine art photographers.

The setting of the art auction and party is Buell's wonderful Peace Barn, where the Museum puts on a great party before and after the live auction. Tickets include parking, bid card, catalog, delicious food, wines, cocktails, Lunny's brings their oysters, music and convivial company in a lovely setting. Susie and Mark Buell are generous supporters of many local non-profit organizations including the Museum. Susie grew up coming to Bolinas with her family and helped establish a space for Bolinas history by funding the Floyd Russell Family History Room of the Bolinas Museum, named for her family. Mark Buell, as auctioneer, uses his charming humor to draw everyone into lively bidding for the art. Currently the Museum's focus is the preview for the Saturday, September 17th auction. This year's art is so diverse there must be something to please every viewer. It is an exhibition for everyone to enjoy. There are also special offers that range from a week in a Paris apartment to wine tasting with legendary wine-maker Sean Thackrey. Tickets are $70 members, $95 for nonmembers... includes a membership. Reservations 868-8809.

Also featured at the museum is a new selection of historic photographs by Gertrude Southworth (1862-1946), for sale. An interesting detail in the photo of Wharf Road is the side of the Bolinas Museum's main building when it faced the Schooner Saloon. In 1935 the building was picked up, turned 90 degrees and joined to an adjacent building. By 1988, these buildings were empty ruins when Ewan Macdonald purchased and beautifully restored them. He also turned a swamp full of garbage into the lovely courtyard where three free autumn courtyard concerts are coming up. Thanks to the efforts of many people, in 1996 the Bolinas So, the art auction and party supports all this, besides being a delightful event.

Advanced reservations are requested: 868-8809.

Thursday 9/1 thru Saturday 9/3 before
6pm, at the Bolinas Community Center.

Make sure to come ready to eat sizzling
BBQ food, drink cold Lagunitas beer & save room for delicious Desserts. This year we offer our first Kids Corner by the Peoples' Store Plaza and please stop by our Membership table to become a Bolinas Community Center member and buy cool T-Shirts!

Please park your vehicle at the Mesa Park parking lot, since there will NOT be parking downtown, and ride FREE with our Fantasic
West Marin Stage Coach!

If you have questions, would like to volunteer or donate for our Silent Auction, pleas
call (415) 868-2128 or email:

lia@bocenter.org.

Bolinas Bakers- Come on down with your favorite sweet goodie to the dessert table. It will make those who purchase the goodies feel really good and it will help the Community Center, thru the funds raised, to support the Community. Call June @ 9052 to help.
