Stinson/Bolinas Community Fund Grant Program

The Stinson/Bolinas Community Fund Grants Program is accepting proposals for projects that benefit the Stinson Beach and Bolinas communities. Each grant will be a maximum of $3,000. Past projects have, for example, enabled seniors to live at home with the help of visiting care providers, supported local educational initiatives, provided tuition support to families in need, and funded local theatrical performances and art programs. The deadline for applications is Wednesday, October 31, 2018.

Application guidelines are available through the Fund's website (www.sbcfgrants.org), by calling Belle Wood at 415-868-2043, or emailing info@sbcfgrants.org. Copies will also be available at the Stinson Beach and Bolinas Libraries.

Gather. Explore. Play!

Ten kids flew off the bus and onto the Stinson green this past Monday. Tyler, Fiona, Kestrel, Satchel, Logan, Johnny, Ava, Sadie, Anwyn and Jasmin. Gratitude was exalted for the Parkside, friends, dogs, the lack of homework, food and freedom. We spoke of the way we can share and democratically chow down on a pile of french fries without any thoughts of scarcity or not getting one's fair share. How pleasant it is to know there is enough and not hoard handfuls in our hoodies! Yes, a much more pleasant way to enjoy the afterschool bounty. A few games of Johnny and Satchel's custom table tennis matches and we made our way into the library.

Marion Weber had put Peter Asmus in touch with Bolinas Stinson Youth Group to see if we could assist the Stinson Beach community with an emergency preparedness project. Peter spoke to the group about how in the event of a disaster, solar power on its own doesn't work and populations are left to be reliant on generators that are costly, and with their diesel fuel, contribute heavily to pollution. Especially in our more isolated and vulnerable communities it's important to encourage resiliency by using micro grid batteries so that the solar power can still be harnessed in the event of an extended outage. Peter pointed to the new exhibit on the libraries gallery walls, as he is joining forces with aerial photographer Morey Nelsen to survey the number of homes with solar panels in Stinson Beach. The Youth Group is helping the project by leaving information at the homes of existing solar energy users, encouraging them to come together and get more information about setting up micro grids. Peter is speaking at Commonweal Monday October 8th on this very topic.

We enjoyed dinner at The Den with another heated billiard tournament. Then there was a sound we hadn't heard in a very long time, rain! We played, ran, checked out the creek (steering clear of any yellow jacket nests) and eventually went down to the basketball courts to rejoice in the return of the water from the sky. Kids used their Youth Group identification cards to board The Stage and loop around the lagoon in the autumnal dark sky back to Bolinas.

INSECTS

Will US program be seen as bioweapon?

The Associated Press

NEW YORK » A research arm of the U.S. military is exploring the possibility of deploying insects to make plants more resilient by altering their genes. Some experts say the work may be seen as a potential biological weapon.

In an opinion paper published Thursday in the journal Science, the authors say the U.S. needs to provide greater justification for the peace-time purpose of its Insect Allies project to avoid being perceived as hostile to other countries. Other experts expressed ethical and security concerns with the research, which seeks to transmit protective traits to crops already growing in the field.

That would mark a departure from the current widely used procedure of genetically modifying seeds for crops such as corn and soy, before they grow into plants.

The military research agency says its goal is to protect the nation's food supply from threats like drought, crop disease and bioterrorism by using insects to infect plants with viruses that protect against such dangers.

"Food security is national security," said Blake Bextine, who heads the 2-year-old project at the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, or DARPA, an arm of the U.S. Department of Defense.

The State Department said that the project is for peaceful purposes and that it does not violate the Biological Weapons Convention.

Bolinas Reads: Diana Mcquaid
October, 2018

Diana Mcquaid grew up in Seattle and moved to Bolinas in 1975 after living in Rhode Island, Rome and Berkeley. She is a graduate of U.C. Berkeley in English Literature. After moving to Bolinas, Diana worked a variety of jobs including the People's store, a food coop that she helped start. She also worked at Smileys, Las Baulines Nursery, and did landscaping. She has published some of her poems in small, local Bolinas anthologies such as Smithereens and Peninsula, New writing from the Coast.

What are you reading now? What's in your pile of books? Do you read one book at a time or several?

I usually read one at a time but on occasion I might read several at once. The books that I presently have in line to read are: Robin, (David Itzkoff), Richard III, (Shakespeare), two books by Aleksandar Heman; The Book of My Lives and The Lazarus Project, and Something in the Water (Catherine Steadman).

Do you like to read paper or ebooks? Audio books?

I always read paper books. I don't listen to audio or read ebooks. However I do enjoy films, music and art.

Are you a browser in the library or do you know in advance what you are looking for? If so, how do you find out about them?

I like to browse and in addition I also read a lot of book reviews in papers and magazines such as the New Yorker, New York Times Book Review, NY Review of Books and Harpers, so I usually know what to order. I look at what others have read and returned. Friends also recommend books to me that they think I would like. However, sometimes books don't live up to the reviews.

Do you have a favorite genre? Any genres that you never read?

I pretty much read all genres. Although when I was younger I read a lot of science fiction. I especially liked the classics, by authors such as Bradbury, HG Wells, and Conan Doyle. During that period of time I didn't read mysteries at all, but now I like a well-done mystery. Some of the mystery writers I like are Michael Dibdin and his Aurelio Zen series, Jo Nesbo, Thomas Harris and Colinas Harrison. Oh and the books by Donna Leon based in Venice. I also like cookbooks, gardening, art, film, music, biography, autobiography, politics, graphic novels and history.

What was your reading experience as a child? What books made an impression on you?

As a child, I read constantly, even walking. I started at age 4 reading neon and advertising signs. I just read everything. I especially liked, Arthur Conan Doyle, Lewis Carroll, Nursery Rhymes, Myths and Enchantment tales, Wild Animals I Have Known, The Secret Garden, The Fairy Books, Comics (explorers and adventurers), Nancy Drew, Poe, Bronte.

Some books that made an impression on me later on were James Joyce's, Ulysses, and Finnegans Wake. I also have read a lot of poetry: language poets, dead poets and living poets.

Is there a famous author you ever wanted to meet? Maybe back in time?

I have met many. In college, I had a class with James Wright, the poet. And later at UC Berkeley, I had classes with Joan Didion, Raymond Carver, and Ishmael Reed. An author I haven't met? Maybe John Ashbery though I hear he can be difficult.

What's the last book you recommended to a friend?

The Mars Room by Rachel Kushner
Theft by Finding, Calypso, by David Sedaris
Any book by Edward St. Aubyn
Consider the Lobster, by David Foster Wallace
The Sympathizer by Viet Thanh Nguyen
The Monk of Mokha by Dave Eggers
Born Round, by Frank Bruni (plus all of his political columns in NYT)

Is there a book that you've always meant to read but still haven't. Any highly rated books that you thought were over rated?

Well, I've never read Ovid or other Romans such as Virgil; Metamorphosis (Franz Kafka); I should also mention the Greeks.

What books do you return to? Are there any books that you like to re-read?

I am often re-reading books that I have read. I return to cook books and reference books all the time.

Do you have a collection of books at home? If so, where do you keep them and do you re-read?

I have too many! I built a 10x12 shed to store them. It is full. I look things up too. A lot of my books at home are small press publications by people I know or knew. I need to clean the shed now.

Who are some of the local writers whose works you have collected?

Well, the list is long but I can mention a few who come immediately to mind, mostly Bolinas local poets: Bill Berkson, Joanne Kyger, Donald Guravich, Robert Creeley, Tom Clark, John Thorpe, Bobbie Louise Hawkins. There are more but the list would be too long.

What kind of characters draw you in as a reader?

Good question. I like explorers; either in physical space or working on a philosophical problem. Books by Conrad, Melville and Jules Verne would be examples of these kinds of characters. I would also like to mention an interesting book I am reading, Letters From Yellowstone by Diane Smith, a fictional account set in 1898 of a lone woman botanist in a group of men and her experiences expressed through her letters.

When and where do you like to read? Describe your ideal reading experience.

I carry a book or article with me nearly always. Never a dull moment. Ideally, all night in bed when it is quiet and there are no distractions.

Why read?

Why not? I've been reading constantly since the age of 4, whatever is in front of me. Always have. I'll read anything on any subject as long as the writing is good. With me, it depends on quality. The good thing about the library is that I don't feel obligated to read anything I don't like. I just move on to the next book.

Vote Early & Vote YES on Measure W

We are about 4 1/2 weeks away from the election. An election that will decide if we mustered enough votes to pass Measure W, the add on 4% increase on The TOT (Tax on Tenancy) paid by short term renters. An election that will determine who the next School Board members will be, and a measure which would prohibit overnight parking of large vehicles on our 3 downtown roads.

As I will be traveling in November I thought I better check and see when I'm going. And, OMG! I won't be here to vote in person. I have never missed an election since I started voting at 21. My Mom always said, "If you don't vote you don't have an excuse to complain." I totally agree with her. So I went online to <https://www.vote.org/> and it was a snap. I just clicked on the topic I needed, filled out the simple form to vote absentee, submitted it and then received an email with the form I needed to sign and mail in. Very easy to do.

There's plenty of time to change your voting status and residency. Let's pass Measure W, a Measure that will financially boost West Marin Fire Departments and the Bolinas Community Land trust as well as all other West Marin affordable housing organizations.

Thank you,
Meg Simonds

Join the Parkin Family Gathering at Bolinas Museum Saturday October 6 ~ 2 PM ~Free

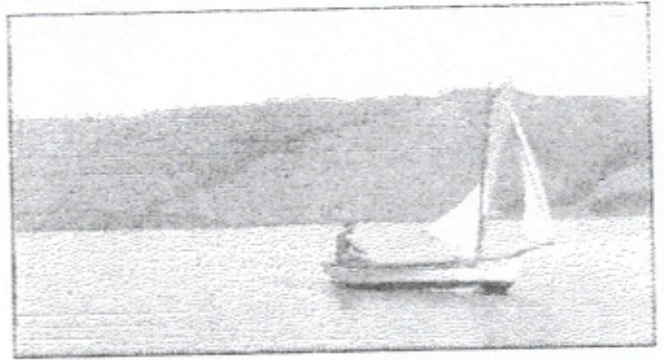

John and Hannah Parkin bought the Flagstaff Inn by Bolinas Lagoon in 1888! Their children were born here and their family remained connected to Bolinas until 1972. Now their descendants are gathering to see the history room exhibit The Parkin Family in Bolinas at the Turn of the 20th Century curated by Kat Parkin and Elia Haworth. YOU are invited to join them for refreshments, hear stories and look at fascinating never-before-displayed photos of early Bolinas!

Did you know that right on the corner where Wharf Road turns--across from today's Bolinas Museum--there was a big hotel from 1862 to the 1906 earthquake? Guests came by horse-drawn stage and many from San Francisco by schooners into Bolinas Lagoon where they disembarked onto docks on the waterside of the hotels.

The Parkin family loved Bolinas. The family was involved with cutting edge technology of the early 1900s and it was their son John Parkin Jr. who was hired to wire Bolinas for its first electricity in 1914. In 1909 John Jr. and his sister Joyce were avid surfers off Bolinas Beach.
