Wilder Than Wild: Film Screening & Panel Discussion 10/19/2018 - 7:00pm

WILDER THAN WILD: Fire, Forests and the Future is a one hour documentary by filmmakers Stephen Most and Kevin White that reveals how fuel build-up and climate change have exposed Western wildlands to large, high intensity wildfires, while greenhouse gases released from these fires contribute to global warming. This vicious cycle jeopardizes our forests and affects us all with extreme weather and more wildfires, some of which are now entering highly populated wildland-urban areas. This screening will be followed by a panel discussion featuring the filmmaker, local officials and fire control experts. The screening is free with donations requested. This event is sponsored by the Dance Palace, KWMR, the Inverness Foundation and the West Marin Rotary Club.

WHAT HAPPENED
10-15-18 Monday Morning Recap
Week-in-Review from Jennie Pfeiffer Riley

This week there was art, there was music, there was more music, there were meetings, as well as many political mailings and emails coming in asking for votes and donations to political campaigns, and I heard (though was not able to get there this time 'round) there were objects that no longer sparked joy for their owners that were offered for sale at the Pop Up market day at Bolinas Commons, AND there were bunnies – mad (in the most delightful way) Madame Charlantania's bunnies on display at her mad rabbit exhibit that is instructive, entertaining, and must be seen to be believed. It is raising funds for RAICES, refugee and immigrant community education services & legal aid support for our multi cultural friends – a very good cause.

An aside: sparking joy is a reference to the book Spark Joy by Marie Kondo, that offers ways to reduce clutter, suggesting that if you hold an item close to your heart and it doesn't "spark joy", pass it on out of your life. This was a gift from a daughter who is always offering me helpful, loving ways to get rid of things she sees as weighing me down. I love that both of my children are so caring and concerned about me. I'm wondering how they will feel if many of the items in the house that don't spark joy, and get passed on, actually belong to them. Household is now all about sparking joy.

Art is everywhere and if you haven't had an opportunity to get to Bolinas Museum or the Bolinas Gallery next door, try to find a way to fit that into your schedule for a mind and imagination expanding experience. In the Gallery, it's all black and white and moving and still, bringing to mind Willie Nelson's reggae song line "I can be moving or I can be still, still's still moving to me" as the AMAZING Chris Whitefield has drawn repeated lines close together with such a steady hand it defies understanding and then he sneaks in a bit of white space now and then to make some "wow" moments that trick the mind into motion. Exhibited with Chris' work is Ruth Charlotte Kneass' stark black mobiles, beautifully balanced, casting intriguing shadows on the white walls as viewers walk by creating a bit of breeze – all a beautiful study in still/movement.

Saturday was all about music. In the afternoon was the annual Kindred Souls Reunion party, so generously offered at the MacDonald's open space, graciously hosted by Barbara and Suzanne, taking us back to the 70's when Greg Shindell and the Kindred Souls were happening in Bolinas. Greg is a delightful songsmith, with loving and nostalgic tunes, humor sprinkled in a happy way and calling folks, even those who were around back in the day, on to the dance floor again, feeling the music connection. Greg is now a troubadour, singing tunes for travelers on the Skunk Train runs. The last few reunion celebrations, he has been accompanied by his son Malakai, extraordinary flute and didgeridoo player. Thanks to everyone who makes that wonderful event happen.

The music spread on into the evening with another excellent Pamela Springer Grateful Dead Night production, with delicious Thai food by Nan Skinner, an entertaining open mic for Deadheads to bring forth their offerings, and an outstanding set of Dead favorites by the Grateful Dead Appreciation Society. Those locals have gotten to the pro level, with what I think is better than Dead deliveries.

There were two education related meetings, the regular monthly School Board meeting on Tuesday, and the Joint Legislative Action Committee meeting on Wednesday, at which there was a report that the Governor did not sign the legislation that changed school starting times for teens, until later in the mornings. Otherwise, we continue to support our students so they can become articulate lifelong learners.

Mail-in ballots are now being delivered, so I'm working on mine and will comment on some of the ballot items next week, after going through the stacks of literature. jp

The Health Risks of Alcohol

On August 24, 2018, the Lancet published a paper based on a study from the University of Washington, concluding that there is no safe level of drinking alcohol. The Lancet is a renowned English and international medical journal. The study shows that in 2016, nearly 3 million deaths globally were attributed to alcohol use, including 12 percent of deaths in males between the ages of 15 and 49.

"The health risks associated with alcohol are massive," said Dr. Emmanuela Gakidou of the Institute for Health Metrics and Evaluation at the University of Washington and the senior author of the study. "Our findings are consistent with other recent research, which found clear and convincing correlations between drinking and premature death, cancer, and cardiovascular problems. Zero alcohol consumption minimizes the overall risk of health loss." Gakidou is a professor of health metrics sciences at the UW School of Medicine, and of global health at the UW School of Public Health.

The study does not distinguish between beer, wine, and hard liquor due to a lack of evidence when estimating the disease burden, Gakidou said. However, researchers used data on all alcohol-related deaths generally and related health outcomes to determine their conclusions.

Alcohol use patterns vary widely by country and by sex, the average consumption per drinker, and the attributable disease burden. Globally, more than 2 billion people were current drinkers in 2016; 63% were male. Alcohol use was less in countries with large numbers of Muslims, as Islam forbids and discourages drinking.

The study looked at deaths and overall poor health attributable to alcohol for 23 health outcomes, such as communicable and non-communicable diseases and injuries, including:

Cardiovascular diseases: atrial fibrillation and flutter, hemorrhagic stroke, ischemic stroke, hypertensive heart disease, ischemic heart disease, and alcoholic cardiomyopathy;

- Cancers: breast, colorectal, liver, esophageal, larynx, lip and oral cavity, and nasal;
- Other non-communicable diseases: cirrhosis of the liver due to alcohol use, diabetes, epilepsy, pancreatitis, and alcohol use disorders;
- Communicable diseases: lower respiratory infections and tuberculosis;
- Intentional injuries: interpersonal violence and self-harm;
- Unintentional injuries: exposure to mechanical forces; poisonings; fire, heat, and hot substances; drowning; and other unintentional injuries; and Transportation-related injuries.

"We now understand that alcohol is one of the major causes of death in the world today," said Lancet Editor Richard Horton. "We need to act urgently to prevent these millions of deaths. The myth that one or two drinks a day are good for you is just that -- a myth. This study shatters that myth."

The take home message from this study is complicated. Companies providing beer, wine and hard liquor are enormously large and powerful, permeating the world of sports, dining and agriculture. Cutting down on alcohol use means resisting pressures from many directions – advertising, friends, social events, and habits. If you want to abstain, and can go 3-4 days without alcohol, you are probably not seriously addicted and can make the shift. You may decide to have a single drink on special occasions, such as your birthday, but be sober at other events. If you have been a regular drinker and have great difficulty abstaining a day or two, you should see your doctor to discuss the possible use of temporary drugs to help you through the transition to sobriety. In either case, you should start going to AA meetings, both for help and to meet other non-drinkers. You will get a sponsor who will help your transition. Don't worry if you don't believe in a God – the group itself, or nature, can function as your higher power.
