FIVE DRONES BOUGHT BY SHERIFF DOYLE WITH NO PUBLIC DISCUSSION

Upcoming Marin Co. Board of Supes Meeting, Tues., October 30, 9am County Building

Concerned citizens throughout the county are needed at this meeting to voice concern about the appropriation of 5 drones and the training of staff by Sheriff Doyle without public input. We want no implementation of drones in Marin Co. until public discussion and policy is in place to protect citizens' privacy, civil rights, and civil liberties.

Hi all, being my favorite time of year, I've risen from the postpartum dead to sing a few spooky numbers with family band Coastal Scrubbers on Halloween night.

We'll be covering some classic hits like last year and encourage anyone to come on down in their creepiest finest.

As before, our amazing Bolinas Community Center is opening the doors for free from 5-8pm. Music promptly at 7pm for an early to bed night for all.

So come on down after trick or treating to partake in the fun and witness the eerie musical talents of Bronwen and Mickey Murch, Kim and Ryan Hett, Isaiah Mead, Irena Eide, Jeff Warrin, Alex Bleeker and yours truly and as always accompanied by a bunch of wild kids and dogs!

WHAT HAPPENED
10-28-18 Monday Morning Recap
Week-in-Review from Jennie Pfeiffer Riley

You are on your own today, as this Hearsay reporter is in Montreal, Canada, so I'm missing the Halloween hoopla and festivities leading up to Wednesday's all hallowed eve. I'll be returning in time for Day of the Dead and elections (hoping there's no connection.) I also hope there will be a massive turnout for voting. We can't be sitting this one out or we get the sort of government someone else chooses for us and that is looking pretty scary. We need to remember the part about "Liberty and Justice for all", kindness counts, and don't forget R-E-S-P-E-C-T.

Here in this city of Montreal, there are many cultures functioning smoothly along side one another. It's so interesting to see folks who look African, European, First Nation, Middle Eastern, Asian, South American, etc., open their mouths to speak and they all sound French. Most speak English as well, and many have a third "home" language. It's all very civilized. There's much to do and see: massive underground malls because of long winters; many murals on walls; art most everywhere; music; great transit service, which is a good thing, as it seems every street is under repair at some point along its route, obstructions and detours at every turn keeping the "sport" firmly imbedded in transport. It seems that continual road repair is what helps keep the economy going, with a bit of graft always an option, and employment always available. I guess one gets used to it.

This report will be on a bit of a hiatus when I return, as updating of the 868+ phone directory will be underway in earnest. Please get additions and corrections, including businesses, in to the Hearsay ASAP. Since so many people are now on cell, (sans land line), those numbers can be put in as well, which is why it is 868 plus and means you might move elsewhere, but you don't have to leave us behind. You may also include your address -- P.O., street, and/or email, though of course, not required.

Remember you are all reporters for the Hearsay News, so jump in with your own colorful coverage of what happened, as we remind ourselves to try to stay positive because the more "yes", the less stress, and as always, P.O.R., press on regardless. Au Revoir JP

The Cerebellum – Surprising New Findings

The cerebellum is located on the underside of the brain and has been thought to be limited to controlling movement. It has been treated like an afterthought by researchers studying higher brain functions. However, researchers at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis say overlooking the cerebellum is a mistake. Their findings, published Oct. 25, 2018 in Neuron, suggest that the cerebellum has a hand in every aspect of higher brain functions -- not just movement, but attention, thinking, planning and decision-making.

"The biggest surprise to me was the discovery that 80 percent of the cerebellum is devoted to the smart stuff," said senior author Nico Dosenbach, MD, PhD, an assistant professor of neurology, occupational therapy and of pediatrics. "Everyone thought the cerebellum was about movement. If your cerebellum is damaged, you can't move smoothly -- your hand jerks around when you try to reach for something. Our research strongly suggests that just as the cerebellum serves as a quality check on movement, it also checks your thoughts as well -- smoothing them out, correcting them, perfecting things."

Dosenbach is a founding member of the Midnight Scan Club, a group of Washington University neuroscientists who have taken turns in an MRI scanner late at night, scanning their own brains for hours to generate a massive amount of high-quality data for their research. A previous analysis of Midnight Scan Club data showed that a kind of brain scan called functional connectivity MRI can reliably detect fundamental differences in how individual brains are wired.

Postdoctoral researcher and first author Scott Marek, PhD, decided to apply a similar analysis to the cerebellum. In the better-known cerebral cortex -- the crumpled outer layer of the brain -- wiring maps have been drawn that connect distant areas into networks that govern vision, attention, language and movement. But nobody knew how the cerebellum is organized in individuals, partly because a quirk of MRI technology means that data obtained from the underside of the brain tend to be low quality. In the Midnight Scan Club dataset, however, Marek had access to more than 10 hours of scans on each of 10 people, enough to take a serious look at the cerebellum.

Using the cortex's networks as a template, Marek could identify the networks in the cerebellum. Notably, the sensory networks are missing -- vision, hearing and touch -- and only 20 percent of the cerebellum is devoted to movement, roughly the same amount as in the cerebral cortex. The remaining 80 percent is occupied by networks involved in higher-order cognition: the attention network; the default network, which has to do with daydreaming, recalling memories and just idly thinking; and two networks that oversee executive functions such as decision-making and planning.

"The executive function networks are way overrepresented in the cerebellum," Marek said. "Our whole understanding of the cerebellum needs to shift away from it being involved in motor control to it being more involved in general control of higher-level cognition."

The researchers measured the timing of brain activity and found that the cerebellum was consistently the last step in neurologic circuits. Signals were received through sensory systems and processed in intermediate networks in the cerebral cortex before being sent to the cerebellum. There, the researchers surmise, the signals undergo final quality checks before the output is sent back to the cerebral cortex for implementation.

"If you think of an assembly line, the cerebellum is the person at the end who inspects the car and says, 'This one is good; we'll sell it,' or 'This one has a dent; we have to go back and repair it,'" Dosenbach said. "It's where all your thoughts and actions get refined and quality controlled."

People with damage to their cerebellum are known to become uncoordinated, with an unsteady gait, slurred speech and difficulty with fine-motor tasks such as eating. The cerebellum also is quite sensitive to alcohol, which is one of the reasons why people who have had too many drinks stumble around. But the new data may help explain why someone who is inebriated also shows poor judgment. Just as a person staggers drunkenly because his or her compromised cerebellum is unable to perform the customary quality checks on motor function, alcohol-fueled bad decisions might also reflect a breakdown of quality control over executive functions.

Marek also performed individualized network analyses on the 10 people in the data set. He found that while brain functions are arranged in roughly the same pattern in everyone's cerebellum, there is enough individual variation to distinguish brain scans performed on any two participants. The researchers are now investigating whether such individual differences in cerebellar networks correlate with intelligence, behavior, personality traits such as adaptability, or psychiatric conditions., Dosenbach said: There are four times as many neurons in the cerebellum as in the cerebral cortex, so if you're leaving out the cerebellum, you've already shot yourself in the foot before you started. The promise of imaging the whole human brain at once is to understand how it all works together. You can't see how the whole circuit works together when you're missing a major piece of it." This article comes from an October-25th post from the website Science Daily. Materials provided are from the Washington University School of Medicine. The take-home message from these findings are - treat your brain with great care! Avoid head injuries in sports; don't let your kids play tackle football. Headers in soccer can also be dangerous. Treat alcohol and other drugs with caution. Do some exercise - it stimulates the production of new brain cells. Getting adequate sleep helps the brain, as do self-calming practices such as meditation. Eating a plant based diet low in salt will prevent obesity and high blood pressure, which will favor brain health. Your brain makes you, you. Have a lot of respect for yourself, as well as others!
