Monday morning Recap is Back

Jenniepfeiffer Riley Week's Review for 12-11-17

This week I was reminded that all things happen in good time and it takes as long as it takes. "You can't push the river," as the saying goes. I was on track to get the 868+ Directory printed and available for purchase at the Winter Faire this weekend past, (which was another lovely one in a long line of happy Faires held down at the Community Center, with excellent food this year from Barbary Coast Catering, beautifully artistic handmade gifts for sale, Santa on Sunday, and a chance to buy a raffle ticket to win the most gorgeous house quilt ever made, sponsored by the Bolinas Land Trust) but "there's many a slip twixt cup and lip" so my best laid plans went south (and south is where, tragically, by the way, there are massive fires continuing to cause alarm and worry as to the health and safety of our southern Cal families and friends.) Hoping that quickly gets under control. I hear UCSB was evacuated yesterday.

I was buzzing along apace on the Directory Monday evening when the power went off (ending computer work until 3:25am, and I happen to know that was exactly when it came back on because P.G.&E. has a new system in place whereby they call when the power goes out and again when it comes back on again. Hours later, when I was ready to actually get up to greet the day, I discovered that though our fridge was on, it wasn't getting cold, which is pretty much why we have it. Everything was defrosted and disappointing, so the day was spent moving stuff to a volunteer fridge, discarding, along the way, disgusting items from the way back part of the fridge where things get pushed to wilt and die. Then there was cleaning up the residue. Finding a person to do repair work took another chunk of time, (Dave Brast in Inverness is very good, but down with the flu), and moving the fridge and cleaning up accumulations of spills and dust bunnies, and things that crawled back there and expired, took the rest of the disgusting day. Sears service arrived next day and miracle of miracles refrigerator was able to be repaired, after abandoned mouse nests were cleaned out so part could be replaced. Finally, crisis was over, but it all put me behind enough so no completion of Directory was possible by Friday Faire opening. I did get many updates and corrections at the Faire, so it all worked out for the best because we will now have a more correct reference. It does mean backing up a bit and redoing some of what's already been done, but I can hopefully pull it together by the World Crafts Faire next weekend. So that's my story and I'm sticking to it. Now if I can just keep the dog from eating it...

Dear friends, This weekend the Bolinas Community Center will be hosting the unique, exotic, international 2-day bazaar, that brings handmade treasures made locally and around the world, to the heart of town, with affordable gifts for others and yourself. Come celebrate the Holiday Season at the 25th annual BOLINAS WORLD CRAFT FAIRE. Relax in the cozy World Café, with awesome cuisine, prepared by renowned Chef Mirta Guzman; a benefit for the Community Center. Spin the "Wheel of Fortune", enjoy Roger's hot apple cider, both days, from 10am-6pm. Any questions? Call flower sierra ~ 831-747-4540

In preparation for the Annual Holiday Singalong with Molly Maguire on Friday 12/22 at the Presbyterian Church (6 p.m.), we will have two harmony rehearsals on the two Tuesdays before the event: 12/12, 12/19 7-8:15 p.m. We will focus on several carols, and then add the harmonies into the community sing along! If you crave singing with others harmoniously in a fun atmosphere, please join us. Cost is $20 total for both rehearsals (scholarships available). RSVP here for rehearsal location: mollymaguire@me.com

THREE GREAT THINGS ABOUT THIS PLACE...

- This morning's walk down from the Mesa to 11 Wharf for coffee & pastries. Thanks, Janet.
- Crazy 5th birthday party for the granddaughter—outdoors, at the solstice, in the sunshine?
- Saturday's annual Amazing Grace holiday music party—truly an amazing grace.

More Good News about Coffee

A recent paper, published in the British Medical Journal (BMJ), looked at over 200 studies on coffee drinking and health outcomes. The work was done at the University of Southampton (England) and the University of Edinburgh. Researchers reviewed over 200 observational studies across many countries. Drinking coffee was consistently associated with a lower risk of death from all causes and from heart disease, with the largest reductions at 3 cups a day, compared with non-coffee drinkers. Drinking more than 3 cups daily was not associated with harm, but the beneficial effect was less pronounced. There was less evidence for the positive aspects of decaf coffee, but it had similar benefits for a number of outcomes. Some but not all of the studies corrected for factors that may be associated with coffee drinking, such as smoking, that may influence health outcomes.

Coffee was also associated with a lower risk of several cancers, including prostate, endometrial (uterine), skin and liver cancer, as well as type 2 Diabetes, gallstones, gout and cirrhosis of the liver. Finally, there seemed to be beneficial associations between coffee use and Parkinson's disease, depression and Alzheimer's.

The authors concluded that coffee drinking seems safe within usual patterns of use, except during pregnancy and in women with increased risk of fracture. They also wrote that there is substantial uncertainty about the effects of higher levels of intake. It may be a trigger for rapid or irregular heartbeat in some people. Additionally – coffee is often consumed with sugars and unhealthy fats which may not be beneficial.

The warnings about coffee during pregnancy are based on an English and Swedish study showing that caffeine use may be associated with lower birth weight babies and an increased risk of miscarriage. Caffeine from coffee, tea, chocolate, soft drinks and some medicines should be counted. The authors suggest limiting caffeine use - a cup of coffee contains about 100 mg of caffeine, while tea may have half that amount. It may be prudent not to exceed one cup a day in pregnancy. Avoid colas, whether sweetened with sugars or chemicals.

Warnings against caffeine use in post-menopausal women come from a few studies looking at osteoporotic fractures and diet. A 2001 study from Creighton University showed that a caffeine intake of more than 300 mg daily was associated with decreased bone density of the spine in women with a particular genotype influencing vitamin D receptors. There is currently no test for this problematic vitamin D receptor. The authors suggest that postmenopausal women at risk of osteoporosis decrease caffeine intake (no more than 3 cups daily) and use vitamin D supplements.

Ways to Avoid Overeating during the Holidays!

- *Include lean protein sources at every meal – such as chicken (minimal skin), beans and fish. Protein triggers a hormone that signals the brain to slow down emptying of the stomach. This hormone also acts to decrease the hunger promoting hormone called ghrelin.
- *Choose minimally processed, high fiber carbohydrates, such as whole grains and vegetables. You will feel full more quickly, and help your microbiome!
- *Chew your food thoroughly, don't gulp! Eating more slowly allows you to know when you've had enough.
- *Get enough sleep. Inadequate sleep is associated with increased levels of hunger and weight gain.
