THE PIRATES OF PENZANCE
PRESENTED BY THE WEST MARIN PLAYERS

West Marin Players presents for its third production, Gilbert & Sullivan's swashbuckling comedy The Pirates of Penzance. Wacky, irreverent, and as entertaining today as it was when it first opened in 1879. The Pirates of Penzance is the story of an orphan boy who was mistakenly apprenticed to a pirate instead of a pilot. A hilarious farce featuring sentimental pirates, bumbling policemen, dewy-eyed daughters, and an eccentric Major General, and peppered with unforgettable melodies and tongue-twisting songs, Pirates is one of the most popular operettas ever written.

Eric Karpeles

Joseph Czapski's 20th Century Life

Fresh from his return after a long research trip to Poland, Eric Karpeles will present an illustrated talk about Polish painter and writer Jozef Czapski. Virtually unknown to Americans, Czapski is a figure of considerable historical, political, and cultural importance in both Western and Eastern Europe. Czapski to TNS, followed by a conversation with Michael Lerner.

Go to Health: World Food - From Surplus to Scarcity

In my last column I explored the question of labeling genetically modified (GM) crops and discussed the problem of superweeds resistant to 'Roundup' and pollen drift from GM fields to adjacent non-GM fields. I decided to devote this column to the question of whether GM crops are needed to feed a growing world population. What I found is that while there is controversy about this issue, GM soybeans, corn, cotton and other crops are widely used throughout the world.

GM cotton has been planted in India, China and the U.S., with a gene for BT (Bacillus thuringiensis) inserted to serve as insecticide. Initially successful, it has given rise to resistant pests that have also attacked other food crops. Farmers also complain that GM seed is 3-8 times more expensive than ordinary seed.

GM soybeans are widely planted in the US, Brazil, Argentina and China, and are mainly used as feed for cattle, swine and chickens. Without this crop, Europe would have to cut back on meat, dairy and egg production. Soybean production in Brazil, used for biodiesel and animal feed, is resulting in cutting of the Amazon rainforest.

Corn originated in Mexico, which is the home for hundreds of varieties. Mexican farmers fear that widespread planting of GM corn will lead to contamination of native varieties. Mexico has legalized GM corn planting, but the issue is extremely controversial. 88% of U.S. corn is GM.

Golden rice, genetically modified to contain carotenes that will help with Vitamin A deficiency, has been planned for years and is now being tested in the Philippines, India and Taiwan. Funding has come from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation to increase the bioavailability of pro-vitamin A, vitamin E, iron and zinc in golden rice, thereby preventing blindness and malnutrition in children in India, the Philippines and many African countries. Companies that have developed golden rice have said that they will allow farmers to save and replant seed, and will not charge royalties until a farmer makes more than $10,000 year from golden rice. Greenpeace and Dr. Vandana Shiva, the Indian anti-GMO activist, oppose the introduction of golden rice because of corporate control of agriculture, loss of biodiversity, and ignoring other important sources of carotenes such as green vegetables and fruits.

On the one hand, GM crops for basic foods like corn, soy and canola are widely planted and used throughout the world. They have been successful in increasing supplies of animal feed and human food. On the other hand, they have degraded the environment and resulted in resistant pests and weeds. But these arguments pro and con are dwarfed by the larger reality of the world's growing population and a transition from food surpluses to food and water scarcity in many parts of the world. There is serious aquifer depletion in China, India and the U.S., countries that produce half the world's grain. Food prices are rising and will continue to rise, according to Lester Brown of the Earth Policy Institute. Brown's latest book, Full Planet, Empty Plates, takes a serious look food & water scarcity and is a call to action. He calls for cutting carbon emissions by 80% by 2020, emphasizing wind and solar energy. Brown is also strong on the need for worldwide family planning and the education of women.

The failure to take family planning seriously in most discussions of food and water scarcity, megacities and relentless population growth is troubling. Wherever it has been introduced widely, on a voluntary basis, there has been a significant drop in birth rates. South Korea and Taiwan have reduced their birth rates below replacement, and Thailand has also been successful with their program. Meeting women's wishes for fewer children with modern contraceptives in South Asia and Africa could be tremendously helpful, but providing information and supplies, and overcoming cultural

WEEKLY WRAP & RECAP 7/8/13 From Jenniepeifferriley

July 4th festivities started with a triumphant tug across the Bolinas Lagoon, both Bolinas teams, women and men, victorious. I was missing seeing Angela rushing around organizing participants, and it was strange not to see Mike Aiken setting things in place. I want to thank them, along with Matt Lewis, for many years of effort for our Fourth. Whatever the controversy, I hope it resolves itself quickly. Our town is too small to have ongoing conflict. I also want to thank the people who stepped in to keep the events going. Things seemed to move along without a hitch, for the most part, and the Parade started pretty much on time with all it's required parts: Fire engine and volunteers at the front, and the carnival dancers followed by the soccer truck bringing up the rear (after 40 years of some of these folks kicking the ball around, I was thinking next year we should have walker soccer behind the truck, with soccer balls attached to the walkers as we kick em down the road.) In between the front and the rear, there were somethings old, somethings new and somethings hilarious. Tacherra's always have a presence, preschool children ride happily year after year, EON, along with Meg and Mark present something appropriately political, Jerry Bo Jeste and friends are there making music in the cage, StuArt with his portable guitar amp again leading a freestyle band of individually creative "patriots" and of course new this year, the beautifully built boat that the Museum pulled off in coordination with Mesa Park and the Town Park boards, and lots of parent and community participation - very nice job on that. I am looking forward to seeing it in our Town Park for kids to play on while the adults bake yummy comestibles in the community constructed new cob oven, thanks to volunteers coordinated by Meka and friends. I must say, I don't like seeing it all locked up, but I guess we have to be sure no illegal substances are burned in there. I feel sure the key will be somewhere easily obtained in case someone is overcome with the desire to bake bread or pizza in the wee hours of the morning, or late at night.

There were some things I was missing this year: the Murch family food float and the stars and stripes they've painted on the road the past several years; also no birdo float this year, which is maybe because of the confusion surrounding their name change - no longer Pt. Reyes Bird Observatory, but now Pt. Bluebird Conservancy for Scientific Study, or something like that. I know I haven't gotten that right and I apologize (will get that information for you).

Howard did nicely hosting the parade from the balcony, Beso Negro played their hearts out, Birthday Boy Charlie Docherty organized some great tunes in the Plaza, and of course, no fourth is complete without Annie Crotts singing the National Anthem to kick it all off - thanks to Annie for 66 years of keeping us on track. It still gives me chills of emotion.

And on it goes, a new batch of babies, last year's babies now kids, yesterday's kids now new parents. Press on. jp obstacles is a huge task. The forces opposed to women's autonomy in many cultures are powerful. An estimated 222 million women in developing countries do not want another pregnancy but lack access to contraception. Many organizations are working on this, and deserve support. Obama is calling for increased funds for international family planning - $635.4 million. In the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. Melinda Gates is making family planning/contraception her priority for the next decade. I should write another column on the many organizations that work on this issue. Stay tuned.

P.S. congrats to Dieter and Tirrell for winning the annual July 3rd soccer club tennis tournament. It was tough competition.

Dear Editor,

Seriously Now will be airing a special edition next week about Friday Harbor, Washington. The show, a progressive news report, is Marin's only television news program.

We have interviewed residents Ed Kilduff and Francine Shaw about commonalities between West Marin and their community on the San Juan Islands, where divisions of epic proportions are pitting friend against friend and environmentalist against environmentalist.

Kilduff and Shaw describe tactics used by the local environmental group that include both an unwillingness to come to a collaborative "table" and frequent name-calling targeting liberal, left-wing local citizens who are labeled as right-wingers or enablers of a Koch brothers agenda.

Both speakers have been watching events in the Point Reyes area carefully because the watchdog group they are dealing with, Friends of the San Juans, once hired Amy Trainer, executive director of the Environmental Action Committee of West Marin, as a staff attorney. They offer some advice and some practical suggestions for West Marin about returning to honest communication and an air of respectful civility.

Shaw explained to us, "The Friends of the San Juans have taken over the role of overseer of permitting. They don't trust the government to do a good job; they don't trust the property owners to do a good job. They are the only ones who know how to develop property... Property owners are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars just to get through the permit process."

Seriously Now can be seen on Comcast Channel 26, AT&T U-verse channel 99 and online at vimeo.com/channels/504497. We air at 11 a.m. on Monday and we air Democracy Now at 10 a.m. Tuesday through Friday. Plans to air the channel from the Community Media Center of Marin via Horizon Cable are in the works.
