WHAT HAPPENED

9-10-18 Monday Morning Recap

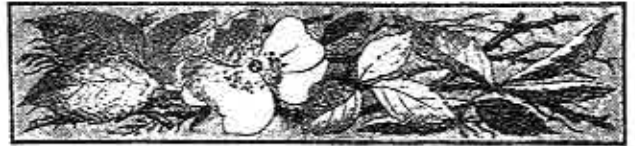

Week-in-Review from Jennie Pfeiffer Riley

There was no recap last week because no Hearsay, because Labor Day, and the laboring was about serving up delicious salads and barbecue, desserts, liquid refreshments, auction items, and lots of lively music. It was an excellent party with new Bolinas Community Center director Kate Ross in the coordination seat this year, and though we surely miss Lia Sabbatini, Kate did an excellent job and is to be congratulated for making it through this first of hopefully many of her Labor Day town parties.

There were some photos in the I.J. of some of the festivities, and there was one of someone who looked a lot like me -- visor, double pair of glasses -- but MUCH older. It sent me running to Amanda Ross' magical, marvelous PAMPER PALACE, for an emergency facial. There are so many excellent ways to be pampered at the Uptown Salon, that any problem can be addressed, hair (now that Philippa is there) to feet. My face is now happy, if not camera-ready.

Also this week there was Thursday's Bulky Trash Pick-up Day, looking here on the Mesa like a Recliner Rodeo. Seems this was the week that all the old, much loved BarcaLoungers and heavily worked recliners came out to the curb. I hope the pick-up crews were wearing their back braces. It was a good service, though I found the instructions a bit confusing: 14 bags, or 7 bags and one bulky item, or two bulky items. Does that mean if you put some bulky items in giant bags you could have 14? How does that work? And here we are trying to reduce plastic, which is a nightmare all by itself. Sister-in-law Laurie Riley is the first in the family to dedicate herself to having a "plastic-free" household, which is admirable but presents so many difficulties (how to get yogurt, etc.) Even bulk items one might purchase arrive at the store in plastic packaging. Laurie is celebrating her birthday today starting a Trash Tagging project, which means one signs up to sort through trash collected from along the roadside and see who the manufacturer is, tally the numbers and let the sellers know where their plastic refuse is ending up and how much there is. This is an admirable endeavor and is righteous work! Right-on Laurie and crew and Happy Birthday! The rest of us can follow up by supporting Beach Clean-up day next Saturday as we hit the beaches with our plastic(?) bags, and collect trash before it makes its way to the giant Island-of-Refuse out in the ocean.

Eleven wine bar bistro will be closed Saturday, September 22nd for a Private Event. We apologize for any inconvenience 415.868.1133

Land Trust Concerns

I have some concerns about the BCLT

- That parking space for a compact car. Out of town, they write "Compact Only" instead of disappearing a useful spot to park and get food, especially for handicapped folks.
- The BCLT is a CORPORATION, not even close to a Government Board. (This should be obvious since we have to give them $ to, maybe, know what they do, or to voteout Board members!) Why would they claim they can do SEPTIC INSPECTIONS? Nor does the BCPUD do that. If you buy BCLT story about Septic the County will be INSPECTING and BCLT can guarantee nothing about it.
- How is it OK to disappear a long time loved Shop space with much needed $ for local employment so someone can have an office? How pompous! Use your McMansion - A.D.
- When is the BCLT going to take responsibility for the Housing WE fought long and hard for to resurrect the sorely neglected Corporation and write grants in order to replace much housing lost in the Downtown due to Bar, Museum, Park, etc. The Gibson House is obviously in need of help.

*"WHERE DO WE COME FROM?
WHAT ARE WE? WHERE ARE WE GOING?"...*
~ Gauguin, 1897

...some of us well may wonder in current tumultuous political climate. But that's where art and poetry shed light, illuminating shadows.

And that's what folk artist/Roving Reporter, Terry Guitar, is often up to, chronicling what we are & creating functional objects shimmering with visionary glint, most recently in Bo Post Office.

That's why I was happy to agree to perform my poetry with her show & local poet-artist extraordinaire, Perry Shimon. Fairfax rapper, Ben Gideon, will open with another fresh take from a younger perspective. I'll address Gauguin's questions, too, with slam poems and body percussion pieces I wrote years ago in Bolinas for National Slams when I represented SF in Boston and Chicago. Also, more recent work and audience call and response poems.

We start at 3PM Bolinas time on SAT., SEPT. 15, in the *taz alcove next to PO. Free and fun - please do come! *temporary autonomous zone

MOONDAY POST for THE HEARSAY NEWS...9.10.18

At 11:01 AM PDT yesterday morning, a New Moon in Virgo at 17 degrees kicked off a new cycle.

The creative and disruptive energies unleashed by the recent eclipses and Summer retrogrades shook things up and now something new is calling. It's Harvest time and this Virgo cycle brings you to a crossroads...what's dead or dying can no longer be ignored.

What's on your must do list? What important details have fallen through the cracks? You can welcome change and clear your path by cleaning up your act and your environment. Make a break with old routines and habits that hold you back.

What are known as the "personal" planets...Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn are now direct, giving you a green light throughout September that urges you to focus on thoughts and actions that create healthy improvements in all areas of your life.

Take time to reflect on what your true priorities are. Then create intentions that support a practical plan that will use your time and energy most efficiently. I have a FREE Moon Guide for you that will help you stay on track. You can download it at www.s22.com/023cjo

Ruler of this Virgo cycle, Divine messenger and/or trickster Mercury is currently traveling through its home territory in Virgo. Worry, anxiety, nit-picky perfectionism...getting stuck figuring life out rather than living in the present guided by Spirit...those are downsides to watch out for. So many changes make it really important to be flexible and stay centered. Prepare to link head and heart together to use the creative passions you nurtured in the last Leo lunar cycle to be of service. Remember that a healthy focused daily routine is your key to success during this cycle.

The Moon moves into balance and relationship-oriented Libra at 8:20 AM PDT on Monday and we're still in the New Moon phase, so be sure to write down your intentions for this cycle. (Remember...writing is a form of instant manifestation.)

At 11:14 AM PDT on Wednesday the 12th, the lunar mood shifts as the Moon enters emotionally intense Scorpio. That night, at 8:36 PM PDT, the Moon enters the Crescent Phase ...time to mobilize your resources to move forward on your New Moon intentions. You may also experience where the inertia of the past gets in your way.

A big key to flowing with the planetary energies is preparation. Prepare for tomorrow with a reading today! Call me at 347-752-3280 for your appointment.

If you're on Facebook, check out Shape Shift Lunar Astrology for posts on Mondays and Fridays.

I love you to the Moon and beyond!

DESPERATELY NEEDED, CATNIP!!!

For forty years Mary and I have made catnip mice and pillows for our community's cats, and sold them at the Annual Holiday Crafts Faire. Over the years our sources for local catnip have dried up, and this year we hardly have any. We have found (with our own cats) that the catnip grown locally is THE BEST. So if you have any to spare, we would be glad to pay or trade with you. The items made from the catnip are a labor of love, and we get great joy interacting with the children and cat lovers when they stop by our booth to choose one for their cat(s).

The Amazing History of the Condom – and Why it is Important Today

Drawings from ancient Egypt show men with sheaths over the penis; the purpose of this – whether ritual or sexual – is not known. The material used was probably linen. Evidence dating back to the 14th century suggests that upper classes in Asia used 'glans condoms' that covered the tip of the penis, and could be dislodged during use. The Chinese made theirs from oiled silk paper or lamb intestine, and the Japanese made theirs from harder materials such as tortoise shell (1).

In the late 15th century, a well-documented outbreak of syphilis occurred among French troops; the disease spread across Europe, and then into Asia. Syphilis was more serious than it is today, covering the body with pustules and leading to death in a few months. To the rescue came an Italian anatomist, Gabriele Fallopio, who invented a device made of linen sheaths soaked in a chemical solution and then dried. The cloths were held on with a ribbon. Fallopio as an anatomist is famous for his description of the woman's fallopian tubes. He performed an experiment, recruiting 1100 men to use his device. Epidemiologists today say that 1000 subjects are necessary to get a representative sample. This happened in the 1490's and is amazing. We do not know the length of his experiment. He reported that none of his subjects became infected with syphilis.

The first documented use of the word 'condom' is thought to have occurred in 1666 when the English Birth Rate Commission reported a drop in birth rates and attributed it to condoms. Condom usage was rising in this era. They were made of animal bladder or intestine, or of linen soaked in chemicals. Condoms were available to buy in pubs, markets, barber shops and from chemists, but due to expense their use was usually confined to the middle and upper classes. In the 1700s Casanova is thought to have been a frequent user of condoms for protection against syphilis. His memoirs make reference to this, as does a picture of him with several attractive young women as he blows a condom like a balloon.

In the 19th century birth control advocates began to promote condom use to less affluent people – advocates in England included Jeremy Bentham and in the U.S. Robert Dale Owen. Assertive and popular women and men traveled and lectured around the country teaching about physiology and sexual matters. They often sold condoms after their lectures. Moralists and some medical professionals condemned this practice as spreading abortion and prostitution. However, in 1861 a condom advertisement appeared in the New York Times, 10 years after the paper was founded.

The rubber vulcanization process was invented by Charles Goodyear and patented in 1844.^[2] The first rubber condom was produced in 1855,^[3] and in a few years several major rubber companies were mass-producing rubber condoms. A main advantage of these condoms was their reusability, making them a more economical choice in the long term. However, skin condoms were initially cheaper and offered better sensitivity. By the end of the 19th century "rubber" had become a euphemism for condoms in countries around the world.

In 1919, due to high rates of sexually transmitted disease (STDs) in World War 1, the search was on for better protection. Frederick Killian in Ohio invented a latex condom which was thinner and easier to use than rubber. The latex used in condoms is a natural compound from rubber that is not vulcanized. Condom making increased, leading to mass production. In the 1920's quality control of condoms was pursued. In the 1950's a reservoir tip and lubricant was added to collect semen and reduce leakage. A lubricant was added to reduce friction. In the 1980s the AIDS epidemic increased condom use worldwide. In 1994 polyurethane condoms were introduced to reduce allergies to latex. And so the refinement and improvement of condoms goes on. The female condom is available in the U.S. and many other countries – its effectiveness against STDs has not been thoroughly studied. Its use is somewhat awkward and cannot be hidden from a partner.

What is the take-home message of this long and rather amazing history of the condom? Be aware that rates of syphilis, gonorrhea and chlamydia have climbed rapidly for the 4th consecutive year in the U.S. according to the Centers for Disease Control. Antibiotics are in danger of becoming resistant. If not treated early, STD's can lead to serious illness. Hepatitis B and HIV can also be a danger to people of any age who have sex with new partners. Talk honestly with your health care provider and protect yourself. Human ingenuity is impressive. Use yours!!
