EASTER WEEKEND

CARS

BOLINAS WAS CLOGGED WITH STRANGERS THIS WEEKEND. APPARENTLY, THE HIGH COST OF GASOLINE HAS GOT WEEKEND REFUGEES FROM THE MEGALOPOLIS DRIVING SHORTER DISTANCES TO GET AIR TO BREATHE. HORNS WERE HONKING AND CARS WERE DRIVING TOO FAST ON OVERCROWDED DOWNTOWN STREETS. THERE SEEMED TO BE A LOT OF LITTER. I WAS UNABLE TO RIDE MY BICYCLE IN COMFORT, AND WAS ONCE FORCED OFF THE ROAD BY SOME ASSES IN A FLASHY RED CAR. TERRACE AVE. WAS A NIGHTMARE FOR PEDESTRIANS, AND CARS WERE CAREENING DOWN ELM ROAD. CHILDREN AND DOGS WERE KEEPING OFF THE STREETS. MAYBE WE SHOULD PUT UP STOPLIGHTS?

CONDOMINIUM ?

Anton Holter is an odds-on favorite to get his 200-unit condominium-resort approved by the board of supervisors and the coastal commission informed sources told the Hearsay News yesterday. His resort complex is being tied into plans to make Palomarin a major entrance to the National Park. The busline being talked about (daily runs between over the hill and the Palomarin trail-head) is just a small part of this whole thing. The GGNRA Transportation Study Board of Control will discuss the proposed busline Thursday night at 5:30 in building 201 at Fort Mason. Paul Kayfetz (Box 310, Bolinas) is a member of this board. Give him our comments in writing if you can't come to the meeting.

from Peter Warshall's RENT STUDY

Stability Renters in Bolinas live, in general, an incredibly insecure life. Typical stories of "caravaning" between three homes in six months abound. The instability arises from no leases on almost every house interviewed, a fast market of house sales so that the renter must move when the house is sold, and special conditions attached to the rent such as vacating on weekends or during the summer for the landlord. One result of this instability is the welcome acceptance of sheds, house trailers, converted trucks and studios as bedrooms without bathroom facilities when these outbuildings are a guaranteed place to live.

RETRACTION

All the tides so far have been wrong! I subtracted one hour (for daylight savings time) instead of adding. I'll check everything out today before publishing further tide tables. Sorry you couldn't get out the channel, Tom.

Monday morning Venus and Jupiter were in conjunction in the dawn sky. They rise about 5:15 over the eastern hills. Watch for them the next few mornings. They are a dramatic sight.

Bolinas Ain't No Sleepy Town

Bolinas ain't no quiet sleepy town
Rock bands silence the birds
Minibikes silence the waves
Chainsaws silence the wind
Dogs silence the loving thoughts of strollers.
Bolinas ain't no sleepy town
Kids riding roughshod down the beach Youngbloods howling their blessed karma from the center
Plaintive pleas from the bulletin board
for shelter
Freaks on acid giggling like seagulls
Tourists rapt in admiration
Their motors purring from Brighton to Wharf.

BACCHANAL AT THE COMMUNITY CENTER

Pierro Resta's Join The Dragon was a howling success Friday night. The food was good and the wine was plentiful. Pierro (the Ed Sullivan of Bolinas) presented some real archetypal skits to a loose (too loose) gathering of townsfolk bent on having a hand-clapping, pagan good time. I, for one, was transported to a land of dreams. In the opening play, Little Red Riding Hood got lost in the sexual woods in an inferno of arms and legs, groans, grunts and moans. There was a lot of writhing about on the floor, as in a fertility rite. This was all played out against a background of home movies. There was also music, dancing, tumbling, speeches, and lots more, all of it intense, to say the least. It would take years to unravel all the work that went into the impromptu psychodrama starring Pierro, Orville Schell, Peter Warshall, and Bill Schoff that took place about halfway through the evening.

The bar was packed afterwards. The favorite song on the full-volume juke box was "We Can Work It Out."
