DEAR AIRBNB TOURIST,

Your vacation/short term rental has led to the eviction of Chinese immigrant families.

We have survived the 1882 Chinese Exclusion Act, 2 World Wars, the 1906 Great Quake and Fires, and the 1989 Earthquake.

But now, our lives, our schools, our grandparents' homes, and social fabric are being destroyed.

This Friday we do the last performance of this mini-tour --at a venerable San Francisco concert venue: Noe Valley Ministry.

We're doing a more stream-lined, edited version of the show. Those of you who were enthusiastic about our West Marin performances might like to see the new improved version. Anyway, TELL YOUR SF FRIENDS!

Emails With a Trump Supporter

SAN FRANCISCO

I HAVE an old friend. If I need something, he's the guy I call. A good father, a good husband. He's got a Ph.D. and is a well-respected college professor. That I also believe he's a racist, misogynist, homophobic lunatic, I'll get to in a moment, because I first want to make very clear that I love him like a brother.

In high school my friend and I ran track together and because I was slow, he'd wait up for me, jogging in place at the top of each hill. And on those long runs we'd talk about philosophy and our own "puny existences." That's the sort of guys we were. Lucky to have each other because our teammates thought we were freaks.

Today we live far apart, and mostly communicate by email. Lately I spend much of life, when I should be working or paying attention to my daughter, sending my friend screeds. And when I'm not writing them on the screen, I'm writing them in my head. I am — and I'm not proud of this — completely obsessed with my friend's position in this election.

My friend is an evangelical Christian and is, reluctantly, even now, supporting Donald J. Trump. He believes that Mr. Trump represents the lesser of two evils. He recently sent me an article from The Wall Street Journal arguing that Christians must do their duty and commit themselves to the difficult task of voting for Mr. Trump in the spirit of Dietrich Bonhoeffer who, accused of having supported the bomb plot to kill Hitler, was executed by the Nazis. Because sometimes the greater good requires, etc., etc., etc.

My unhinged response read, in part: "Bonhoeffer's courage is the same COURAGE as voting for Trump??? I expected more from you, a lot more. The only saving grace is that millions of Christians aren't buying it. I'll pray for you, my friend. And one day when you have to explain to your kids how you, as a Christian, but more important as a human being, could have supported this ticket, I'll tell them that you truly believed you were helping save the country from a monster enabler of sexual predators and rapists of 12-year-olds — you had no choice. The all-white echo chamber where you received your information had so distorted your ability to see that you were temporarily blinded from reason."

My friend responded, as he always does, mildly, asking me to please watch my language. Can't we discuss these issues without resorting to vitriol?

"I love how this election has turned you into a moralist," he wrote. "You're like an even more miniature Tim Kaine. My son (who was reading over my shoulder) asked me to tell you to 'give Donald Trump credit for being a human being.'"

I tell my old friend he's revolting and to tell his wife I say hi.

Once again, instead of seriously engaging with the issues at hand, you sling out insults. It's a very cogent article, one you are free to disagree with. But this isn't engagement. You are not addressing the very legitimate concerns about Hillary. That is problematic. Happy birthday by the way."

As furious as I get, deep down, I don't actually doubt his sincerity when he tells me, mildly, always mildly, about Hillary Clinton's "atrocities."

Thinking about my friend makes me also think of my father. If my friend is the definition of a reluctant Trump supporter, my father, had he lived to enjoy this carnival, would have been the candidate's poster child.

I have it on good authority (my mother) that my father wept for hours on the night Bobby Kennedy was killed in 1968. In the '70s and early '80s, he was an active member of the finance council of the Democratic National Committee. But by the '90s he had come to embrace a shouting Fox News worldview of anti-immigrant and misogynist fervor, and he railed against what he called my hopeless political correctness.

The story of my father's conversion is complicated, but if there was one event that led to his nursing his grievances, it is that in the early 1990s, he was sued for sexual harassment by one of his former employees. Though the case was settled out of court and my father was never in jeopardy of losing his law license, he stepped down from something called the Character and Fitness Committee of the Illinois State Bar Association. You might laugh at this, but it's a real thing, and my father was especially proud of his service on this committee that measures a would-be lawyer's moral fiber.

He felt misunderstood, maligned. Did he do it? He always said the allegations were patently untrue, but few people believed him.

By the time of the Obama administration, he had begun referring to the president with a Yiddish term I won't repeat here (not, Dad, out of political correctness, but because it revolts me to this day and I can still hear you saying it in my ears). What he often had to say about women, especially my mother, who had left him, I won't include here, either. But when I heard the Access Hollywood tape of Mr. Trump, I called my brother and asked him who the guy on the tape sounded like.

"You gotta ask?"

But he was my father; I loved him. When he died a few years ago, I happened to be staying with my old friend when I received the news. That weekend we ran together and talked. "Didn't he teach you how to play chess?" my friend asked. "Who introduced you to Dickens?"

He helped me remember that, behind the anger, my father was still, and always, my father. I can't expunge him from the record, my record. And to be honest it now brings me a warped kind of joy to think of what a kick he'd have gotten out of this last (ineffectual) roar of men of a certain age.

In 2014 my friend's father died as well. We commiserated over email, about however much you think you're ready for it, nothing prepares you for the void fathers leave behind.

In a bit I will send a message to my friend to say he's a revolting Neanderthal, that I'm not kidding, that I believe he's a danger to himself, his students, the Republic itself. I'll also say hey to Diane and the boys. That new school working out?

How comforting our most deeply held political convictions are, in contrast to our love, which, though inexplicable, is somehow always — to use one my friend's favorite words — merciful.

Coastal Commission Meeting 11/2/16

That was an amazing turnout and inspired performance by West Marinites at the CCC hearing in Half Moon Bay! I have already heard from three different County CDA folks who noted that they had never seen anything like it at any hearing before, and that there was absolutely no question that our past few weeks' effort, culminating in a dominating showing yesterday, absolutely moved the needle in the way County leadership approached and resolved the submitted LCP. Just from folks who'd checked in with me prior, we had at least 40 folks make the long drive down, and I'd estimate with others I didn't know of we were easily 50-60 strong, and comprised the vast majority of the audience.

For those of you who could not stay for the final vote: We did not get everything we wanted yesterday. We did not get County's EH passed as submitted. Supervisor Kinsey moved to have the Commission certify the LCP as modified by CCC staff - with the exception of two key changes to AG sought by ranchers and farmers - and with the major exception of Amendments 4 and 5 governing Environmental Hazards. He asked that the "Executive Directors of both staffs meet to work out a compromise", and acting Executive Director Ainsworth of the CCC agreed to this. CCC staff noted that it was unlikely that a compromise on EH could be brought back to the CCC for approval prior to mid-2017. It is very likely now that final action on Marin's LCP will fall to our next Supervisor.

It would have been wonderful if our turnout did convince the Commissioners to accept "our" County EH and end this process at a final Board vote next month before Steve leaves. But I'd suggest that realistically, it hasn't been the history of the CCC to ever simply give in like that. If you look at the final AG section, it took eight years of hard fighting by ranchers, farmers and their leaders at the Farm Bureaus, like Peter Martinelli and Dominic Grossi, to even achieve yesterday's compromise, and even with all that the final two edits to AG didn't pass the Commission unilaterally. By comparison, our village and neighborhood associations have really only been working directly on EH for two or three years. Yes, it shouldn't take that long, and yes, we think our arguments should have prevailed, but hey - democracy's messy and slow. The way to win in the end is keep on pushing for what's right.

I also want to highlight a few key wins I think we did secure yesterday. We heard, for the first time I can personally recall, various Commissioners chastise their staff for overreach and tell them directly that they would not vote Yes in the future if staff simply came back with their most egregious proposals (and by the way, most of the time Commissioners go out of the way to laud their staff's proposals - not a single voice raised in that regards yesterday, any largely sympathetic Commissioners were keeping their mouths shut.) Clearly, Coastal Redevelopment and the "50% of a roof/foundation since the 1970s" was rejected - Ainsworth even went on the record saying he would personally ensure staff backed that out in subsequent negotiations - both on commonsense and procedural grounds. (Technical point but to the latter point, a Commissioner raised a very valid process argument against her staff that attempting to "extend the law beyond what is written in the Coastal Act", as the staff literally admitted they were doing, should not be done in our LCP but instead should go through the formal public policy process; that's actually a very important argument for our attorneys to keep hammering on, and County staff gets that.)

The idea that we all have to post multi-hundred-thousand-dollar bonds and agree to remove our homes anytime we need a coastal permit was roundly criticized; I'm confident we'll get that out. And on the sea level rise issue, CCC staff was forced by Commissioners to go on record that the "intent" of their proposals is the same as County's, that 3 feet over FEMA is what they meant to say in their proposal. It's of course not actually how the internally contradictory language they submitted reads, technically, but in negotiations that's a line in the sand that I suspect County won't have to cross back over as they finalize EH; we can probably help force some fairly simple cleanup of that language to conform to County's original proposal that works for us.

End of the day, I do want to pass on the most significant thing I heard after the meeting, which was that Brian Crawford came in energized this morning and firmly committed to actively re-engaging the West Marin public as head of County CDA as he gets this resolved. We understand that it will not just be executed as some sort of smoke-filled-back-room deal cut between himself and Ainsworth. To make sure that happens, we need to publicly go back to Brian, ED Ainsworth, Steve Kinsey and our Board and make sure they know that the public expects and demands to be included in the final EH process, and that we really deserve to.

Because what we've shown so far is that we are educated on the issues, we engage constructively, and at the end of the day it's our homes and villages that are on the front line - as Mike Matthews said, because "You're marching with big boots through our front yard". Keep fighting!

- jeff Loomis

2016 Thank You Notes

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 2016

SUCH a surprise! So many people to thank!

1. Jill Stein voters: You helped elect a man who pledges that he will, in his first hundred days, cancel contributions to United Nations programs to fight climate change. If your vote for Ms. Stein did not end up advancing your green agenda, it did allow you to feel morally superior to all the compromising schmoees who voted for Hillary Clinton. And your feelings about your vote are more important than the consequences of your vote. So — thank you!

2. Gary Johnson voters: Thank you, for similar reasons. You, too, may now reward yourselves with feelings of warm self-approval, and your libertarian agenda will now be advanced (or not) by someone who admires the governance of Vladimir Putin. And to Mr. Johnson himself: Not only can no one blame you for this outcome — we're all free agents, man! — but you can stop looking for Aleppo.

3. James Comey: Your publicity coup may have affected the outcome of the election. Or it may not have. But it will certainly breed speculation that it did. Such discussion will in some way serve the reputation of the F.B.I. Or not. You had to bravely contravene bureau protocols to make your contribution, so to you we owe a special thanks!

4. Anthony Weiner: You also found a surprising way to contribute! Thank you, sir — your act never gets old!

5. Jimmy Fallon: How did you manage to shine a nonthreatening light on someone who alarms so many women, frightens so many undocumented families and slurs so many minorities? Can't have been easy! Thanks! Maybe now you could have the Grand Wizard on your show: He leans his head to you, you slip his hood off and ruffle his hair. Could be a cute bit!

6. All our media friends. Thank you for preserving reportorial balance. You balanced Donald Trump's proposal that the military execute the innocent families of terrorists, against Hillary's emails. You balanced pot-stirring racist lies about President Obama's birth, against Hillary's emails. You balanced a religious test at our borders, torture by our military, jokes about assassination, unfounded claims of a rigged election, boasts about groping and paradoxical threats to sue anyone who confirmed the boasts, against Hillary's emails. You balanced endorsement of nuclear proliferation, against Hillary's emails. You balanced tirelessly, indefatigably; you balanced, you balanced, and then you balanced some more. And for that — we thank you. And thank you all for following Les Moonves's principled lead when he said Donald Trump "may not be good for America, but he's damn good for CBS."

7. The Electoral College. Thank you, for being you.

I cannot thank: Hillary Clinton. She is not a morally perfect person — her fault! She was not the perfect candidate — her fault! Misogyny may have magnified her failings so as to show them balancing the outsized failings of her opponent — and that might not be her fault. But she fought to the very limits of her ability to deny us Tuesday night's surprise, so I do not thank her. Pooh on you, Hillary Clinton!

I do thank, lastly: 8. The American electorate. Because in the end, we all did it together. We did it! We really did it!

Sunday's Membership Meeting of the BCLT was inspiring. "What a Beautiful Board!" I shouted out loud as I saw the amount of brains, looks and talent that was the new BCLT Board.

"Comrades!" I thought to myself as each board member professed their support for the town I love. The reference was not intended to evoke Communism but Communityism and the newly revived Community of Bolinas.

"Comrades!" I say again. "Together!"

Thank you to the BCLT, StuArt

Notable & Quotable: Would Bernie Have Won?

Sen. Bernie Sanders, appearing Monday on "The View":

Here's what happened. Do we have racists and sexists in this country? We do. On the other hand, I think what happened is Trump touched a nerve on the part of millions of people that media doesn't often talk about. And that is, you've got a middle class for the last 40 years that has been shrinking. You've got people working two or three jobs. You've got a single mom who can't afford $12,000 a year for child care. You've got a worker who's seen his job go to China. You've got a parent who's wondering how in God's name when I make $40,000 a year am I going to be able to send my kid to college. You've got a 60-year-old worker today who has $500 in the bank and is facing retirement. You've got millions of people who are living in extraordinary economic anxiety. And meanwhile the very richest people and largest corporations are doing phenomenally well. And people are saying all over this country—black and white, Latino—"What about me?

Who's going to stand up for me?" And in my view the Democratic Party has not been as strong as it should be in saying yeah, we're going to stand with the working people.

Joy Behar: But you did.

Sanders: I did. I did.

Joy Behar: Let me ask you something: So if you were the candidate, they say you would have won. I've been reading about that.

Sanders: The answer is, who knows, and who will ever know. But the point is we've got to talk about the future and how we go forward.

Public Notice

Public Pre-school Program for 4-Year Olds

The Bolinas-Stinson Union School District is now registering students for a new public preschool program for 4- year olds that is scheduled to open in August of 2017.

This program will be free of charge to families residing in the district and there may be additional room for students who live in neighboring school districts.

This preliminary registration* period will open on October 23 and will close on November 21.

The program will open only if there are sufficient numbers of students whose families are committed to enrolling them. One of the reasons that the district is accepting early registrations is to assess the number of students who will actually attend next fall.

The District wants to hear from anyone potentially interested in this program.

If you wish to register your child (who will be 4 years old by September 1, 2017) please be ready to provide the following information:

- The child's name
- The child's date of birth
- The child's place of residence- the address
where the child sleeps most nights.
- The name of the parent or guardian.

If the program opens next year as planned, additional registration materials will be required.

You may register by calling District Secretary, Johanna Scutt at (415)868-1603 or by e-mailing the information noted above to: johannas@bolinas-stinson.org or by visiting the district office at 125 Olema-Bolinas Road in Bolinas.

* Early registration is very important but does not guarantee that your child will be enrolled when the program opens.
