 CELEBRATING AGRICULTURE IN COASTAL MARIN

With DR. TED SCHETTLER, Science Director at the Environment Health Network | DENNIS DIERKS, Paradise Valley farmer propagating microbes for biodiversity | DR. SADJA GREENWOOD, physician and writer, consultant | & JOHN HEDLUND, founder and CEO Biodinami, an international agronomy and soil science company. Moderated by STEVE HEILIG, healthcare ethicist, epidemiologist, and environmentalist

Wise farmers have long understood that the key to healthy soil is a rich biom of healthy microbes. Today, the medical and scientific community are pioneering a new understanding of the influence microbes have in the health of both our bodies and our minds. Join us for a lively conversation with this dynamic group of panelists.

BOLINAS STANDING

WITH STANDING ROCK

#NODAPL

The Bolinas Standing With Standing Rock T-shirt is a donation to supporting long time local Jesse McCollum as he winters in Sacred Stone Camp at Standing Rock.

The black on grey turtle shirts designed by Schehera Van Dyk and the #NODAPL Water Guardian shirts (both with Water is Life on the back) are available this Saturday at the Love Party at the BCC and 12/9 at the BCC Winter Fair. Or by calling me at 415-868-8830.

Turtle shirts are $25 and the #NODAPL Water Guardians shirts are $15. All funds will be used for supporting Jesse and others Bolinas people that have been making the big sacrifice of putting their bodies where our values are.

Please get one, wear one, and if you can get a photo of you wearing one to me I will make sure Jesse sees it. You can email me photos at ameliastraton@gmail.com.

Thank You, Amelia Straton

Silver linings

"The arc of the moral universe is long, but it bends towards justice."

Trump's victory seems to me a repudiation of American progress, even the fabled "American Dream," and certainly against Reverend King's famous dream as well. And it's also certainly a big con on many if not most who voted for Trump, as he's not likely to help anybody other than his fellow wealthy people. It looks like the Bush, Jr. scam again—a front guy for the same old power elite, cloaked in fake populism. A very old trick. And then there's all the bigotry unleashed ...

It seems to me the first concrete and attainable goal might be to regain the Senate in two years, for damage control at a minimum.

I also understand why some have said they wanted to flee the USA. But that's irrational—especially in California. For now, I keep reminding myself that in my primary field of public health we had the best election in history here: Landmark victories on tobacco and soda taxes, funding care for the poor, legal pot, gun control, a ban on plastic bags and more. Huge industries threw massive amounts of money and deception to defeat these proposals, but California's voters saw through all that. The net effect will be huge reductions in suffering and premature death. And many good things that start in California move elsewhere, even nationwide.

Yes, I'm reaching for silver linings here—the environmental and women's health implications of the election appear ghastly—but I'll take the positive where I can find it, recall that Clinton won the real vote by millions and be as grateful as ever to be a lifelong Californian. And once I come out of this deep dark funk, I guess I'll just keep working for good goals, against this backlash and in favor of "the moral universe"—however long its arc may turn out to be.

—Steve Heilig

NICHOLAS KRISTOF

12 Steps For Voters In Despair

Traumatized by the election results, many Americans are asking: What now? Here are steps that any of us can take that can make a difference at the margins. Onward!

1. I WILL accept that my side lost, but I won't acquiesce in injustice and I will gird for battle on issues I care about. I will call or write my member of Congress and express my opposition to mass deportation, to cutting 22 million people off health insurance, to nominations of people who are unqualified or bigoted, to reduced access to contraception and cancer screenings. Better yet, I'll attend my representative's town meeting and put him or her on the spot.

2. I WILL try to do small things in my own life, recognizing that they are inadequate but at least a start: I will sign up on the Council on American-Islamic Relations website, volunteering to fight Islamophobia. I'll call a local mosque to offer support, or join an interfaith event. I will sign up for an "accompany my neighbor" list if one exists for my area, to be an escort for anyone who is now in fear.

3. I WILL avoid demonizing people who don't agree with me about this election, recognizing that it's as wrong to stereotype Trump supporters as anybody else. I will avoid Hitler metaphors, recognizing that they stop conversations and rarely persuade. I'll remind myself that no side has a monopoly on truth and that many Trump supporters are good people who want the best for the country. The left already has gotten into trouble for condescending to working-class people, and insulting all Trump supporters as racists simply magnifies that problem.

4. I'LL DO my part to support the society I'd like to see. I'll eat Chobani yogurt because its owner has been subjected to racist attacks for his willingness to hire and promote refugees. Likewise, I will give blood and register for organ donation — for at least they'll make me feel better. As will a tub of Chobani.

5. I WILL support groups like the Southern Poverty Law Center that fight hate groups, and back the center's petition calling on Donald Trump to disavow bigotry. Depending on my interests, I'll support an immigration rights group, the A.C.L.U. or Planned Parenthood. And I'll subscribe to a newspaper as one way of resisting efforts to squelch the news media or preside over a post-fact landscape — and also to encourage journalists to be watchdogs, not lap dogs.

6. I WILL support refugees, one of the most demonized groups in the world. The International Rescue Committee's work for refugees can for the first time be supported through donations to The New York Times Neediest Cases Fund. In many cities in America and abroad, volunteer can help refugees through www.rescue.org/volunteer. More refugee resettlement agencies are at www.acf.hhs.gov/orr.

7. I WON'T let it slide if a friend makes degrading comments about a minority or women. Even if it's over Thanksgiving dinner, I'll push back and say something like: "Come on! You really think that?!" Similarly, I may not be able to prevent a sexual predator from reaching the White House, but at events I attend, I may be able to prevent a sexual predator from assaulting a drunken partygoer.

8. I WILL resist dwelling in an echo chamber. I will follow smart people on Twitter or Facebook with whom I disagree. I will also try to enlarge my social circle to include people with different views, recognizing that diversity is a wonderful thing — and that if I know only Clinton supporters, then I don't have a clue about America.

9. I WILL do what I can in my own life to make sure that the needy aren't forgotten in the next four years amid paroxysms of tax cuts for the wealthy. I can support Reach Out and Read, an outstanding program that helps at-risk kids learn to read: A $20 donation covers one child for a year, or one can serve as a reader. Or I can be a Big Brother or Big Sister or help through iMentor.

10. I WILL understand that progress may unfold at the state or local level, and I will engage there. It's encouraging that voters in four states passed minimum wage measures, and in three states approved gun safety measures, while other states and localities are wrestling with climate change. And, of course, a starting point is to get my friends to vote.

11. I WILL take on sexism and misogyny, which in forms like domestic violence, sexual assault and sex trafficking affect women and girls across the country. Even today, Republicans and Democrats should be able to work together to get funding for women's shelters or to prosecute pimps.

12. I WILL not lose hope. I will keep reminding myself that politics zigs and zags, and that I can do more than shout in the wind. I can fight for my values even between elections, and even at the micro level I can mitigate the damage to my neighbors and attempt to heal a social fabric that has been rent. □

Post-truth chosen as word of the year

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Oxford dictionary editors have chosen their word of the year: "post-truth," a term sometimes used to describe the current political climate.

Oxford Dictionaries said Wednesday that use of the term rose 2,000 percent between 2015 and 2016, often in discussions of Britain's decision to leave the European Union and the campaign of President-elect Donald Trump.

The dictionary defines "post-truth" as "relating to or denoting circumstances in which objective facts are less influential in shaping public opinion than appeals to emotion and personal belief."

But it's often used in the phrase "post-truth politics" and belonging to a time in which truth has become irrelevant.

Each year, Oxford University Press tracks how the English language is changing and chooses a word that reflects the mood of the year.

Runners-up for 2016 word of the year include "Brexititeer," an advocate of the United Kingdom leaving the European Union; the extreme conservative movement known as the "alt-right"; and "hygge," (pronounced hoo-ga) the Danish feel-good philosophy connected to the English word hug.
