Relaxation

Relaxation
Is total peace.

When you relax completely, there is total silence. No thought enters the mind, no problems arise from the body, no memories grip the spirit. This overwhelming sense of tranquility is really all meditation is about. The neutral stillness of the mind renews the tired soul, and this is regeneration.

Even if you don't follow a formal meditation program, it is good to sit quietly for a little while every day. This form of rest should be as regular as sleeping each day. If you can sit still and just relax completely, you are actually meditating. All the various forms of complicated techniques and visualization exist because people can't bring themselves to this very simple state of relaxation. Their minds are constantly racing, their bodies are out of balance and the worries of the day weigh heavily upon them. They cannot let go, so they need a formal routine to follow. But if you can simply sit down and empty yourself, you will experience a wonderful silence and a deep, satisfying sense of peace.

One should try to return to a relaxed state on a regular and periodic basis. The simple reason for relaxation is that it renews us, purifies us, and leaves us with a profound feeling of serenity. It is not a ritual. It is not a religious obligation. It is a wonderful state away from problems. In it, we are poised in our natural state.

- DENG MING-DAO -

Are you not ashamed of heaping up the greatest amount of money and honor and reputation, and caring so little about wisdom and truth and the greatest improvement of the soul?

-Socrates-

It is very wrong for people to feel deeply sad when they lose some money, yet when they waste the precious moments of their lives they do not have the slightest feeling of repentance.

- The Dalai Lama-

This Is What Was Bequeathed Us

This is what was bequeathed us:
This earth, the beloved left
and, leaving,
Left to us.

No other world
But this one:
Willows and the river
And the factory
With its black smokestacks.

No other shore, only this bank
On which the living gather.

No meaning but what we find here.
No purpose but what we make.

That, and the beloved's clear instructions:
Turn me into song; sing me awake.

- Gregory Orr

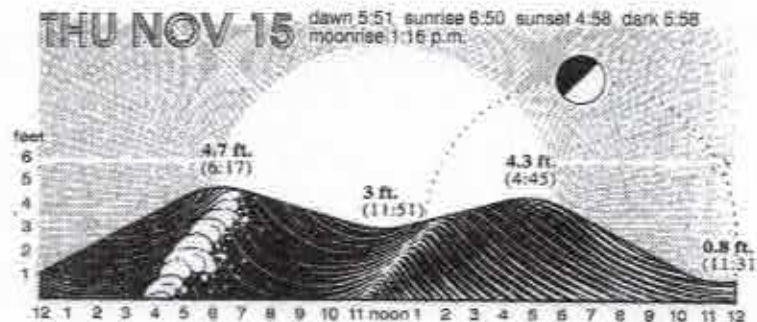

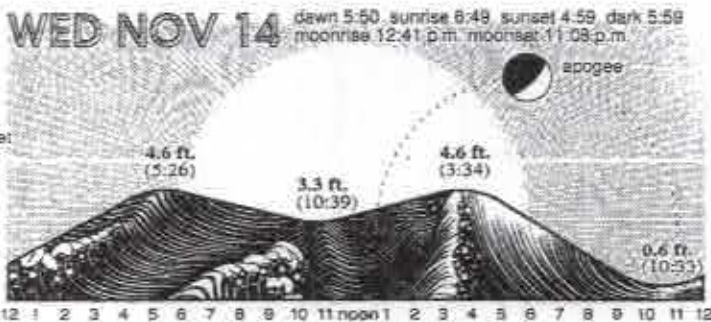

To Come Home To Yourself

May all that is unforgiven in you
Be released.

May your fears yield
Their deepest tranquillities.

May all that is unloved in you
Blossom into a future
Graced with love.

-John O'Donohue-

Spiritual outlaws

Overcast outlaws on the loose again
The Sheriff can't catch 'em, nobody can
Slippery like ice and half as cold
They can run and hide and never be sold.

They'll rob and cheat and steal the whole day
Then turn it around and give it away.
Gold and diamonds or campfires and beer
It's hard to figure, no matter what you hear.

Beater cars and mobile homes
High rise penthouses with big golden domes
Rising and falling like winter leaves
Disappearing, disappearing icicles under the eaves.

Heretic candles are lit in the night
Never enough to win the big fight
Religions are gone and blow in the wind
Time clocks are broken, stopping all sin.

Spiritual outlaws don't fit the mold
Don't try to buy one—they can't ever be sold
They'll take all your stuff and give it away
Pay you back some other day.

They've burned up the robes
And closed down the roads
They've cleaned up the restrooms
With big, burly brooms.

They dance in daylight and under the stars
Laugh inside churches and behind cold, steel bars
The rule book's in ashes, the Popes on the run
The Outlaws are here, the end has begun.

- Steve Quirt

Dominican retreat leader blurs line between life and afterlife

November 15, 2018 Christina Gray

Anyone interested in cultivating a "sense of living in eternity now" should open themselves up more intentionally to the communion of saints and souls, said the leader of an All Souls weekend contemplative retreat at St. Mary Magdalene Church in Bolinas Nov. 3.

"If you don't already have the custom of intimate prayer with the saints or the souls, I want to give you a few tips," said Dominican Father Nathan G. Castle, a priest and author with a unique ministry to what he calls "stuck souls" struggling in afterlife after harrowing deaths.

If you want to create a relationship with anyone who has died you can just ask, said Father Castle who joined the Dominican order in 1979 and has led the Catholic communities at Stanford University and Arizona State University. "You don't have to 'project yourself out' or 'telepathically send a message,'" he said. "You just have to say I want you to be with me right now."

"St. Dominic was very helpful to me in the years when I needed a lot of help," he said. If you ask one of the saints or souls to be with you, they will be with you just as you are now. Father Castle's presentation called, "Living in Eternity Now: Friendship with Jesus, the Saints and the Souls," shared insights derived from his experiences as a priest who has helped hundreds of people who died suddenly and often traumatically, adjust to the afterlife.

"Nobody drags you down that road or into that light," he said. "You have to go willingly into the afterlife and participate as you are able." There's a certain portion of the population that struggle and it's not a statement of morality or being "sentenced" to it.

In his self-published book "Afterlife, Interrupted: A Catholic Priest Explores the Interrupted Death Experience" (Fluid Creations, 2018), Father Castle shares the stories of 13 such people who over the course of 20 years have come to him in his dreams seeking help in resolving their afterlife experience. Father Nathan and a prayer partner were able to help come to terms with their fate.

Father Castle was invited to lead the part silent, part interactive retreat at the historic rural parish by Dominican Father Bruno Gibson who travels each week from Tiburon where he lives to celebrate Sunday Mass at St. Mary Magdalene, a mission of Sacred Heart Parish in Olema. He and a small group of dedicated friends have created an extension of his longtime "View from a Ridge" retreats in Marin County in the metaphorically-named "View from the Shore" retreat series in Bolinas.

Although such contact with the "other side" was not something he sought out, Father Castle said that he has come to believe that providing such help is something the Holy Spirit has given him to do.

"Inside the body of Christ, I believe that you and I can talk to anybody because we are connected physically," he said. It's not just wishful thinking, he said. "Aren't there people you love who live in different states? It's the same thing with death and the afterlife."

About 20 participants began the day with morning prayers and contemplation of question: "How would my life be different if I lived my entire life conscious of the eternal companionship of Christ, the saints and the souls?"

Lunch was taken silently in the serene coastal graveyard followed by a contemplative walk led by sprightly 87-year-old Father Bruno, who took retreat-goers down the dirt driveway of the historic church, past a rural farm stand and through a densely-vined coastal trail to the sweeping shore of the Bolinas Lagoon. The day concluded with evening Mass concelebrated by both Dominican priests.

Father Castle spoke in a hush to Catholic San Francisco in the graveyard that the topic was "especially fitting here."

"What I try to do is help people understand that to be human, to have a human nature is to be both temporary and permanent, mortal and immortal, in different ways at the same time," he said.
