YOUR HEARSAY NEWS IN THE RED

Unless you are among the estimated 8% of people who are color-blind, you may have noticed that today's paper is printed entirely in red. Unfortunately, this is not one of our bold artistic gestures, but rather because the black ink pump on our printing press has broken.

Replacement parts for this particular machine are pricey and hard to come by, so please consider making a donation of any amount, to help us get back in black.

If your love of the Hearsay compels you, you could drop some cash by our office at 270 Elm Road, or send a check to Hearsay News, PO BOX 327, BOLINAS 94924

Thank you for your ongoing support of the Bolinas Hearsay News.

Commonweal Symington Forum 2/9

I was privileged to attend some of the morning session before I had to leave for my health care work in Sonoma. I left with my mind opened in a way I'd never had imagined. As a mind/body practitioner of very many years I hadn't noticed I still kept attitudes about emotions, the mind and the clinical facts of health conditions in cloistered areas as if the convenience of those separations needed to remain an essential commitment. I'm not sure I can change that habit/reflex but I'm grateful for the efforts of the larger Commonweal community purpose and practice giving me the chance.

Spring cleaning

for a new start

new start, new start

Spring! Love is in the air.

Spring! Sex is everywhere.

Procreate, reproduce,

Nature's pumping with new juice.

Rutting, bumping,

Jumping at the chance.

Stately now we do the courtship dance.

Spring! Watch the birds and bees.

Spring! Flowers on the trees.

Bloom and blossom,

Leaf and bud.

Spring is pumping in the blood.

Mating ritual and new romance.

Stately now we do the courtship dance.

Bolinas artist circles themes of destruction in new publication

By Silas Valentino

"Hello 2018—let's find the starfish in our brains." So begins Bolinas artist, musician and woodworker Charlie Callahan's new publication, "See Life," and for the next several thousand words, readers are brought into the author's swirling manifesto. Locals may know him as a drummer in various bands or through his exhibit at the Bolinas Museum in 2015, which featured glowing blue sea urchins emerging from the wall and scavenged items he used to express dark ideas about ecological turmoil. He's also an avid surfer and splits his time between sea and land. "See Life" both warns of an imperiled planet and serves as a catalog of his artwork. His abstract and tangential prose explores topics ranging from how human beings have destroyed the earth in just a couple of centuries to his social observations from a vantage point between real and metaphysical worlds. "I've never been diagnosed with attention deficit disorder, but my thoughts skip from one to another without filling in the blanks. I'll write in the same way, another balloon lights up and I go there," Mr. Callahan said. Three local editor friends—Ashley Eva Brock, Katie Eberle and Nicole Lavalle—cast an eye on his 9,000-word essay before it went to print. "I love Charlie's brain, and in the editing process I was trying not to curb or tame it down," Ms. Brock said. "I tried to make it more cohesive for people so they wouldn't get lost and put it down." Religious iconography and references appear throughout the publication (the cover depicts a starfish crucified to a cross). For Mr. Callahan, who grew up near the Bible Belt in Ollio, the way humans are destroying the earth is comparable to the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. "I was thinking back to my childhood and how I was being obedient to a religious doctrine," he mused. "Coming from a quote-un-quote Red State, there are really strong opinions on both sides. I was trying to challenge all of that from a more philosophical point of view. And people get more fired up about things when you use religious icons," Ms. Brock, a clothing designer who shares her studio with Mr. Callahan, said. "See Life" also can be interpreted as commentary on sea star wasting disease, which has ravaged populations of starfish and is linked to rising ocean temperatures. "They're dying for our sins," she said. Copies of "See Life" are available through Mr. Callahan, who can be reached at frottinlava@gmail.com.
