Master of Disaster

by StuArt

On Saturday I attended the opening for Ron Garrigues's show in San Francisco. Titled "From Beginning to End" it showcased Ron's art from the last 25 years including bronze castings, scratchboard drawings and sumi ink paintings.

The exhibit was at the Varnish Gallery tucked away on Jesse Street, not far from the Museum of Modern Art. The gallery is a beautiful space that shows "edgy" art. Ron's art is certainly edgy, filled with skulls, lingams & yonis and spermatozoa. One person quipped, "It takes balls to put your sperm on the walls." I was reminded of what Bru told me about the paintings of Francis Bacon, who he knew in London. The spurt of white paint that Bacon included in most of his paintings was truly a "money shot" as they say in the porno movie industry. I leave it to your imagination to decipher the term.

Many of Ron's Bolinas friends and supporters showed up for the opening and the Varnish Gallery was packed and throbbing. The bronze sculptures were displayed on pedestal islands that were arranged by Ron's friend Al Farrow. Al is known worldwide for his metal sculpture. He builds cathedrals, synagogues and mosques out of guns and bullets. The combination of religion and weapons is a startling and powerful artistic statement. One of Al's cathedrals, crafted from handguns and bullets is on display at the De Young museum.

The walls were hung with Ron's scratchboard drawings of the Big Bang (the Beginning) and sumi ink representation of zygote and the subsequent overpopulation of the Earth (the End, or the 6th extinction.) On one wall were six bronze castings of lingam-yonis. Ron lived at a Shiva ashram for three years and that experience informs much of his work. He reversed the traditional depiction of the lingam rising from the yoni, and instead placed the butterfly form of the yoni as if it was blossoming from the side of the mighty phallic lingam.

Ron's show was a ballsy display of the elemental forces of creation and destruction. His art is especially meaningful during these "end times." I was impressed that the two women, Jen and Kerri, who run the gallery, would mount such a tantric, apocalyptic exhibit. The Varnish Gallery reflects their attention to detail and aesthetic concern, truly remarkable!

I assisted Ron in preparing the show - cleaning and waxing the bronzes and packing the paintings for transport to the city. I enjoyed helping Ron and connecting with the art scene in the city. Everyone involved in the show seemed like characters from central casting, and the Bolinas crowd at the opening was as colorful and wild as Bolinas itself.

Charlie Docherty told me the next day how impressed he was with the show. "Ron's still doing it at 81." Charlie said. "He's an inspiration to us all."

Grecian Temples

Because I'm getting pretty gray at the temples, which negatively impacts my earning potential, and does not necessarily attract vibrant young women with their perfumed bosoms to dally with me on the green hillside, I go out and buy some Grecian Hair Formula.

And after the whole process, which involves rubber gloves, a tiny chemistry set, and perfect timing, I look great. I look very fresh and virile, full of earning potential. But when I take my fifteen-year-old beagle out for his evening walk, the contrast is unfortunate. Next to me he doesn't look all that great, with his graying snout, his sort of faded, worn-out-dog look. It makes me feel old, walking around with a dog like that.

It's not something a potential employer, much less a vibrant young woman with a perfumed bosom would necessarily go for. So I go out and get some more Grecian Hair Formula-Light Brown, my beagle's original color. And after all the rigmarole he looks terrific. I mean, he's not going to win any friskiness contests, not at fifteen. But there's a definite visual improvement. The two of us walk virilely around the block.

The next day a striking young woman at the bookstore happens to ask me about my parents, who are, in fact, long dead, due to the effects of age. They were very old, which causes death. But having dead old parents does not go with my virile, intensely fresh new look.

So I say to the woman, my parents are fine. They love their active lifestyle in San Diego. You know, windsurfing, jai alai, a still-vibrant sex life. And while this does not necessarily cause her to come dally with me on the green hillside, I can tell it doesn't hurt my chances.

I can see her imagining dinner with my sparkly, young-seeming mom and dad at some beachside restaurant where we would announce our engagement.

Your son has great earning potential, she'd say to dad, who would take a gander at her perfumed bosom and give me a wink, like he used to do back when he was alive, and vibrant.

- George Bilgere

We are visitors on this planet. We are here for one hundred years at the very most. During that period we must try to do something good, something useful with our lives. If you contribute to other people's happiness, you will find the true meaning of life.

DISCOVERY

After 20 years of drilling in the coldest spot on earth, Russian scientists on Feb. 5 bored more than two miles through Antarctica's ice crust to reach Lake Vostok, an ancient subglacial lake the size of Lake Ontario that has been locked away for 20 million years. A sample of the ancient water was delivered to Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin, 59, and future probes could help develop techniques in the quest for life on places like Europa, a moon of Jupiter.

I can only imagine how sweet & pure that glass of water given to Prime Minister Putin must have tasted! Just think how it would be to drink a 20 million year old glass of water! The THOUGHT alone is staggering!!!

CABARET OPENING IN MARIN

THIS FRIDAY, MARCH 2, 8pm

LARKSPUR CAFE THEATRE

(special Discount prices this Friday &amp; Sunday only)

A divinely decadent experience! Following a great run in SF at Fort Mason, Independent Cabaret Productions and Shakespeare at Stinson will present a startling rendition of Tony-award-winning musical Cabaret, directed by Hector Correa.

The Larkspur Cafe Theatre production will use an intimate space much like what Christopher Isherwood, author of the memoir upon which Cabaret was based, saw in pre-World-War-II Berlin. The audience won't just be watching a show; they'll be experiencing the dark, decadent world of Weimar Germany, a strange locale on the border of drama and burlesque, a place on the edge of civilization, and of humanity itself. Refreshments are available, so pull up a cabaret table and enjoy the show. Our old friends Sally, Cliff, & the Emcee will all be there. Hopefully you too!

WHERE: Larkspur Cafe Theatre (American Legion Hall Post 313) 500 Magnolia Ave. Larkspur, CA.
