Bolinas Museum Presents
BAY AREA NATURAL HISTORY:
A GREAT MINDS PANEL
DISCUSSION
Thursday, April 18th / 6PM / Bolinas
Community Center

Join us for an enthralling conversation with prominent local scientists and artists who will share insights into our local and global ecosystems. Biologist, author and research associate Peter Pyle has studied birds and the ecosystem of our region for forty years, including working on definitive studies of Farallon Islands' birds, surrounding waters and great white sharks. Harvard trained, photographer Josie Iselin uses her large images, research, and new book to illuminate complex seaweed life and interspecies relationships such as that between kelp and sea otters. Dr. Nils Warnock Phd, Director of Conservation Science at Cypress Grove, spent eight years as director of Audubon in Alaska, where half a billion birds from all over the globe come to nest. Artist Ellen Litwiller creates exhibits for natural history museums, from the Smithsonian to California Academy of Science. A graduate of the Art Institute of Chicago, she also exhibits her fine art. Climate scientist Dr. Peter J. Gleckler contributed to multiple reports of the United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), and has particular expertise in ocean warming. Elia Haworth moderator. This program is presented in conjunction with the current exhibitions at Bolinas Museum focused on Bay Area natural history and prehistory. Free. A suggested donation of $10 at the door. Thursday event so there will be plenty of parking!

The Leviathan

Pacific Sun

Josh Churchman is a West Marin resident who runs his small commercial fishing boats out of the Bolinas Lagoon and Bodega Bay. He's 67 and has been fishing his whole life. The Whale That Lit the World (Hidden City Press; $12) is his first book. Here are some excerpts.

The Fishing Disease

To this day, whenever I see a new body of water, I wonder what kind of fish might be living in it. I wonder what I could use to catch some of them. My mom taught me not to keep fish I wasn't planning to eat, but she didn't kill my love of fish or fishing.

Fishermen are a strange breed of people. It is almost like we have some kind of ancient disease. The disease is strikingly different for each individual it infects. For some it is a freshwater disease that takes a fisherman to rivers and lakes. For others, it involves an ocean.

The disease may come on suddenly, later in life, or it may be present at birth and follow the fisherman to his grave. Some people have it strong in their life, and then it just vanishes. Some people can be cured, but not very many.

Of all the diseases mankind faces in this world, it is far from the worst affliction someone could encounter. Water is most of what we are, and what is a fish if it is not all about the water? Wondering what lives in that water, and how to catch it, defines a fisherman. Turning it all into a profession is just one of the more advanced symptoms of a deeply infected individual.

People who love to fish dream of finding a really good spot and having it to themselves. Secrecy is just one of the many idiosyncrasies that go along with living with the disease. A close friend will ask you where you caught those fish, and your gut instinct will be to evade without really lying, to minimize and deflect an open, honest answer.

It has been said that ninety percent of the fish are caught by ten percent of the fishermen. I do believe that this is true. However, the ten percent is never the same ten percent year after year. Some guys get hot, and then they are not. Some people improve with age, and some do not.

People will say fishing is all about luck, but luck is such an elusive creature. Bad luck is just as common as good luck.

The Cordell Bank

Cordell Bank, located fifty miles west of San Francisco, is part of an underwater mountain range that sits perched on the edge of the continental shelf. The top of the bank lies 120 feet from the surface. A mile west of that high spot, it drops off the continental shelf to six thousand feet deep.

Eleven thousand years ago, the Cordell Bank was oceanfront property. Sea levels have risen 340 feet since then. The Golden Gate Bridge would have been built over an immense river rather than ocean. This ancient river system may have helped carve the deep Bodega Canyon that bends around the western edge of the Cordell Bank.

Westward of the bank is also one of the largest stretches of open ocean on the globe. For over three thousand miles, there is nothing but water until you reach the Aleutian Islands near Japan.

Mysterious things live around the Cordell. It is not only fish and birds and whales and dolphins that like this spot. Drifting in a boat, with the engines off, there are shadows under the surface that can't be clearly seen. More creatures live here than any other place I have ever been. You can't see what the shadows are, but they are certainly felt in your sensory soul.

I often feel I am being watched when I fish the bank, watched by intelligent life forms that are curious about me and why I am there. I sense their demand for a certain amount of respect. I am a visitor, not a local boy. It would be ridiculous to try to pretend that these feelings do not exist. It is as though the spot is sacred and protected by the guardians of the deep. I have seen white sharks here that rival, in size, the model they used in the movie Jaws. I have seen several blue whales that might have set world records for size. Eighty or one hundred feet long and weighing two hundred tons each. I saw a white sperm whale at the bank that could have been related to Moby Dick. It is the creatures I haven't seen that scare me the most.

Part of me knows that there are not "mysterious creatures" that lurk in the deep waters, eluding human contact. Part of me hopes there are unseen and intelligent creatures that have avoided human contact. This is another example of a dialectic born at sea: It is a big ocean, and we haven't seen all there is to see. One thing is for sure, there are creatures out there that can and will eat you. There are whales so big that a flick of their tail would sink my little boat. . . .

If you are lucky enough to find an exceptional spot, you would be a fool to show it to very many people. If you discover a technique that has eluded other fishermen in the past, it would be wise to keep it close to your chest. An older frustrated fisherman once told me, "What takes years to learn takes minutes to copy." He was surrounded by other boats.

For the past thirty years, I have been a very lucky fisherman. I didn't feel particularly lucky at the time, but in hindsight, I was living the "good old days" and did not recognize it for what it truly was. I had a lot of fun making money catching fish. Having fun and making money do not combine very often.

A measure of success in anyone's life could be how much fun you had getting there. Fishing is a hard way to make a living, or it can be a way to not make a living. Fishing can put you in some of the most beautiful surroundings this world has to offer, or it can put you in places that are so dangerous that you have to be lucky to survive. . . .

'The Whale That Lit the World' is available online at lulu.com. You can also find it at Pt. Reyes Books, the Bolinas Market and elsewhere around the North Bay. Contact the author at josh.churchman@gmail.com.

Community Expression:

Downtown Park:

- Update on additional help for staff/ landscapers re: Park maintenance. Will contact outside landscaper for 4x per year weeding of DT park, cape weed removal, and clean up of playground. @ $2,000 4 times per year ($8,000 total). Michael to prepare a schedule of what needs to be done and when, so we can track the progress. Another note: The windbreak is growing and has taken over the baseball diamond.
- Status of new hand blower in Men's restroom. On its way, will be installed in March.

Mesa Park:

- Status of remaining signage (Skate park signage, handicap signage, no overnight parking, no fires, no illegal dumping). Signs to be installed this week (week of 3/11/19). It was agreed that the big heavy sign needs to be removed by next month.
- Skate park follow up items - concrete clean up, planting of grass seed & plants. Landscape completion. Planting is pending end of rain season. Toby suggested a community skate park volunteer clean up day. Mark requested a detailed landscape plan on how to finish that area.
- Snack shack renovation ideas - Toby to present final budget. Board to vote on. Toby presented his final budget of $4,200. Board will reach out to another contractor to assist in the building. The Board discussed adding another overhang from the back as a covered area. Amber motions to approve budget, Leilani seconds, all in favor (4-0).
- Status of clean out and removal of trailer. Pending dryer weather in the coming months.
- Mesa Park cape weed removal status? Discussed in downtown park update.
- Discussion on possible grants for basketball court re-asphalt, fencing, picnic tables / shade structure. The group discussed a designated path leading to the back to avoid the need for building a fence. A community member volunteered to make a walking bike path on the far side of the skate park and the motorcycle club would pay for the materials. Still pending bids for basketball re-asphalt. Michael to check with the Marin Parks service for contractor recommendation.
- Sewer hook up fee follow up. Michael met with BPUD, we are responsible for our own sewer hook up.
- New mower status. Now looking into another option with a 50" deck or the John Deere mower at $6,500. Michael to ask our contractor for his opinion, Michael to base his decision on that and proceed with what he thinks is most suitable.

MY LIFE AS SANDOZ MESCALINE
(Bolinas Snapshot, 1972)

- David St. John

Jade lifted her face just briefly from the mirror she'd lined with a few pink hexagrams of Sandoz mescaline & said vaguely to her devotees sprawled nude

On a lush Turkish rug You know I'm sick of the "dystopian novel"
& we all nodded even the one guy

In the room who'd actually written one & Jade looked up in cool

Disdain adding I mean that fucking phrase: "dystopian novel"
not any of you sweethearts

& I was thrown into the depths of Darwinian despair as she looked

Straight at me saying Lately only one thing gets me off so I'm forever grateful to my friend Reggie for

Smoothing the rough skin of a drumhead to toss his Inuit divination

Dice—six miniature-carved-ivory huskies with rubbed violet coats
all of them rolling & tumbling

& landing on the drumhead perfectly upright on all four paws

Subtly assembling into the very finest arctic dog team ever known anywhere close to Bolinas California

& in one somatic heartbeat I'd harnessed my spoon-sized sled

To their oracular dancing bodies & in an instant like night fog
I was gone

Museum talks focus on Bay Area natural history

I would like to alert your readers to two very special events about the natural history and prehistory of the Bay Area presented by Bolinas Museum, in conjunction with main gallery exhibition "Changing California: Historical Ecology of the Bay Area." This exhibition was inspired by Laura Cunningham and her remarkable book "A State of Change," published by Heyday Press. Cunningham, a gifted naturalist, artist and author, will present a free gallery talk at the museum on Sunday, April 14 at 2 p.m.

On Thursday, April 18, the museum will present a Great Minds panel discussion at the Bolinas Community Center. The weeknight was chosen so locals could find parking in Bolinas to partake in this fascinating event focusing on both the local and planetary environment. The panel includes biologist Peter Pyle; Josie Iselin, photographer and writer; scientist Dr. Nils Warnock; artist and natural history museum consultant Ellen Litwiller; and Dr. Peter J. Gleckler, a specialist on ocean warming and climate change. Don't miss it.
