TRUE Animal STORIES

Tuesday, July 22nd
6:30: Music/refreshments
7pm: Stories

An evening of personal, true stories written and read aloud by folks like you and me. FREE!

Featuring:

Anna Gade	Schehera Van Dyk
Martine Algiers	Molly Brown
Neshama Franklin	Amy Prosser
Karen Prosser	Jane Mickelson

Music by: Caleb Norton

True Animal Stories

My husband calls True Stories, "the best entertainment in town." He is not an avid playgoer and only attends plays when my daughter or I are in them (and not always then, either). Yet, he has not missed one of the 15 True Stories events I have organized here and in Baja over the years.

I shamelessly stole the idea for True Stories from Spark in Santa Monica. It is a story-telling event once a month with a theme. Seven "folks like you and me" read aloud a personal/true story 6 to 8 minutes long. I attended Spark because my brother was reading a story about when we hijacked a plane to Oaxaca (true story!). I was moved and inspired: honest, real, moving, funny, entertainment. No baloney, no hype, and no phoniness. I loved everything about it. The individual readers became one: raw, imperfect, and lovable humanity. And, though I might not relate to the specific details of people's stories, I could relate to the emotions and the human experience. I even loved the free refreshments afterwards (so generous) and the chance to talk to readers and share stories. "I wanna do that in Baja!" I thought. So, I copied their rules (minus the theme--our town is too small to limit the stories) found a space and rounded up seven people courageous enough to tell a story. People, both readers, and audience loved it, so I have continued.

I decided a few years ago to try it out in Bolinas. I knew people here have tons of good stories. However, it was a bit harder for different reasons. People are busier here, I was not well known enough to coerce people or call in favors, and people here don't like ANY rules. (And, believe me, rules are few: personal/true, 6 to 8 minutes when read aloud.) I cancelled the normally required rehearsal (people are too busy, plus no need for a mic here). Whitney, the hip, generous minister at St. Aidan's at the time was open and game (and even read a few stories herself over the years.) Kerry (Stinson librarian), Michael Rafferty, Neshama Franklin, and Rob Stewart are some of the locals who generously shared their hearts and lives.

Since then, Jane our librarian, has organized one True Stories at the library, and I've done a few more here (one with the theme Sea) and one in Stinson. This year's theme, inspired by the library is Animals. One performance will be at the Bolinas Library, July 22nd with some repeat readers (Neshama, Anna Gade, and Jane Mickelson), some newbies (Molly Brown, Schehera Van Dyk, Amy Prosser, and Karen Prosser), and some surprise guests. Another reading will be at the Inverness Library July 29th, with Molly Boyes, Maggie Harmon, Jon Cozzi, myself and others. Please come and support your friends and neighbors. Who knows, you may be inspired to tell your own True Story.

True Animal Stories will be at the Bolinas Library, Tuesday, July 22nd, light refreshments and music by Caleb Norton at 6:30, reading starts at 7pm. Inverness True Animal Stories will be July 29th. 6:30 music and light refreshments, 7pm, reading. FREE.

Sandy

At 85, Sandy was the oldest elder at the Elder Fire Circle on Saturday's full moon.

Sandy was from Inverness and normally he would be at a full moon sweat looking forward to a plunge in the ocean. "I miss the ocean, but here I am."

Sandy told the group he had lost everything in the Inverness fire. But he went on to say it had been a blessing in disguise. The fire had rid him of the burden of stuff. Now a simple bowl and spoon had special meaning.

He said the same about no longer driving. He didn't need or miss the hassle of automobiles.

Sandy hitch hiked to the Dance Palace for his ping pong group. Sandy praised the game of ping pong. Anyone could play, if they were 5 or 85.

He recommended playing with the "other hand" the non dominant hand, and said it opened new neural pathways in the brain.

Sandy had seniority at the Elder Fire Circle, and he shared the wisdom of his years with us.

BOLINAS-STINSON UNION SCHOOL DISTRICT GOES "LIVE" WITH COMMUNITY SURVEY

BOLINAS, CA, July 16 —With the exhortation to "Make your voice heard!" the Bolinas-Stinson Union School District is launching a community survey this week soliciting input from district voters on a range of proposed facility upgrades and improvements on Bolinas and Stinson Beach Campuses.

The survey, developed by the Fiscal Oversight & Facilities Planning Advisory Committee (FOFPAC)—an advisory body to the school superintendent and board trustees—is based upon results obtained from a comprehensive BSUSD Staff Survey conducted in May 2014.

Staff Survey results, reported at the June 10th school board meeting, identified a number of areas as "needing improvement" with the top suggestion being replacement of the ageing "Quesada" Building used for P.E. classes, assemblies, ballroom dancing and art shows. Additional areas identified include: technology, additional classroom and appropriate "break-out" space (utilized for small-group learning), inefficient and outdated kitchens on both campuses, larger and safer art shops and special education learning support service areas.

The Staff Survey also identified "non-existent", but relevant, facility areas such as a science lab, gymnasium and performing arts space, and an outdoor classroom.

Given the range of projects identified, BSUSD Board Trustees are now turning to community members for help in charting a future. In order to address facility needs, especially on a larger scale, BSUSD would need to pursue a general obligation bond or tax referendum.

GO bonds, an ad valorem tax on the assessed value of real property, must be approved by 55% of district voters. Proceeds can be used to fund capital construction and improvements under the guidance of a Citizen's Oversight Committee, which is established to ensure funds are spent only on projects identified in the ballot measure.

Board Trustee and FOFPAC Chair Cyrus Harmon states "Community input is critical to developing a comprehensive and effective facilities planning process. So, please 'make your voice heard' and share your thoughts with us."

The survey is open until July 31st, 2014. Results will be presented at a special meeting of BSUSD Trustees on Tuesday, August 5th at 1 pm in the Bolinas Campus Library.

The large, school bus yellow postcards will be mailed to all Bolinas and Stinson Beach box holders this week. The postcards offer a brief introduction to the survey and direct residents to the online survey link. The survey can be accessed at www.bolinas-stinson.org/fofpac or directly at <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/BSUSDcommunity>. Paper surveys will be available at Bolinas & Stinson Beach libraries.

For questions, please contact FOFPAC committee member Christine Cunha at (415) 797-2106.

Bolinas welcomes back Pirate Pizza Tuesdays
BY TOM GOGOLA

click to enlarge

John Sabbatini says he's done just about everything in his 20 years as a chef and caterer—from a stint at Harry's Bar to a run as sous chef at the now-closed Noonan's in Larkspur. These days he's working at An Affair to Remember, a big catering outfit in San Rafael—and, praise the Lord and pass the pepperoni, he's again making pizza in Bolinas.

His Pirate Pizza Tuesdays had been on hiatus, but Sabbatini recently returned to the kitchen at the Bolinas Community Center, to the delight of the people of Bolinas (including this writer).

"I had a lot of people calling me, asking, 'Where's the pizza?'" says Sabbatini, a Marin County native who worked in a Novato pizzeria as a 14-year-old. "It's good to serve the community," he says. He serves the community with popular thin-crust pies such as the Island Heat, which features pineapples, pepperoni, garlic and jalapenos.

He cranks out up to 40 pies a night and offers it by the slice too.

Sabbatini started his business, Barbary Coast Bistro, several years ago with an emphasis on pizza and barbecue. Now he's exploring a Kickstarter campaign to finance his Barbary Coast Bistro mobile cooking truck—or even a storefront pizza joint in Bolinas.

His vision for the truck, he says, includes organic sandwiches and tacos using locally sourced ingredients, along with the pizza. "I'm not looking to go fancy or high-end," says the 34-year-old. "I've done foie gras and filet mignon. Now I'm interested in clean, wholesome, unpretentious food made with good ingredients."

Civility about oysters; immigrants among us

It would seem that the oyster fight is almost over; Kevin Lunny has announced that he is closing the Drakes Bay Oyster Co. at the end of the month. He still has a suit against the Interior Department, but he's not going to wait until that's decided. I think this is a good thing. I like a good oyster as much as the next person, and the Bay Area will be losing a nearby supply of good oysters. But on balance, it's really useful that the fight is over. I hope it really is over.

I got a lot of mail on the column I wrote about this situation, and almost all of it mentioned the same thing — the damage to the community that this fight has caused. It's neighbor against neighbor there. Friends have stopped speaking to each other. Shunning has occurred.

West Marin is a small town, or a series of small towns linked by common interests. Eventually, everybody knows everybody, and a culture of interdependence flourishes. That's beneficial; it's one of the things that make small towns different from cities, where people too frequently don't know their own neighbors.

When these bonds are frayed, the necessary trust breaks down. Every public meeting ground — the store, the restaurant, the yoga class — becomes a minefield. People, in their letters to me, talked about being afraid to voice their opinions — afraid of the acrimony, afraid of the unwelcome confrontations.

West Marin doesn't take kindly to suggestions from the outside, but I'll make one anyway: It needs a Truth and Reconciliation Commission, or perhaps just a Reconciliation Commission — no one wants to argue about the Truth anymore.

People would try to figure out a way to get beyond this. Apologies would be made, hands would be shaken. That might restore the web of civility that holds the community together. No issue, not even an oyster farm, should get in the way of that.

In which we sense good news all over, and some hypocrisy, too.

swim." Locke started at the buoy in Fisherman Bay of the South Farallon Islands and tagged the south tower of the Golden Gate Bridge as he swam by. Timing didn't stop until he fully passed the bridge, Morrison said.

Two others have swum from the Farallones to the Northern California shoreline but not all the way to the bridge.

A month before Erikson's 1967 swim, Army Lt. Col. Stewart Evans was the first person to successfully swim to the coast from the Farallon Islands, but currents carried him north of the bridge to Duxbury Point in Bolinas.

Earlier this year, Craig Lenning, a marathon swimmer from Denver, made the crossing from the Farallones but landed at Muir Beach.

The swim site Openwaterpedia listed Erikson's distance as 31.5 miles, 1.8 miles longer than Locke's, but it's unclear whether that figure represents the total distance swam, including getting pushed off course by tides, which doesn't count in the distance totals for marathon swimming.

"The islands haven't gotten closer," said Phil Cutti, co-founder of the Farallon Island Swimming Federation, which organizes and sanctions swims from the islands. Cutti hailed Locke's crossing as a "record-breaking swim. Truly an epic

How Frances and Joel entered the world's stage

By Samantha Kimmey

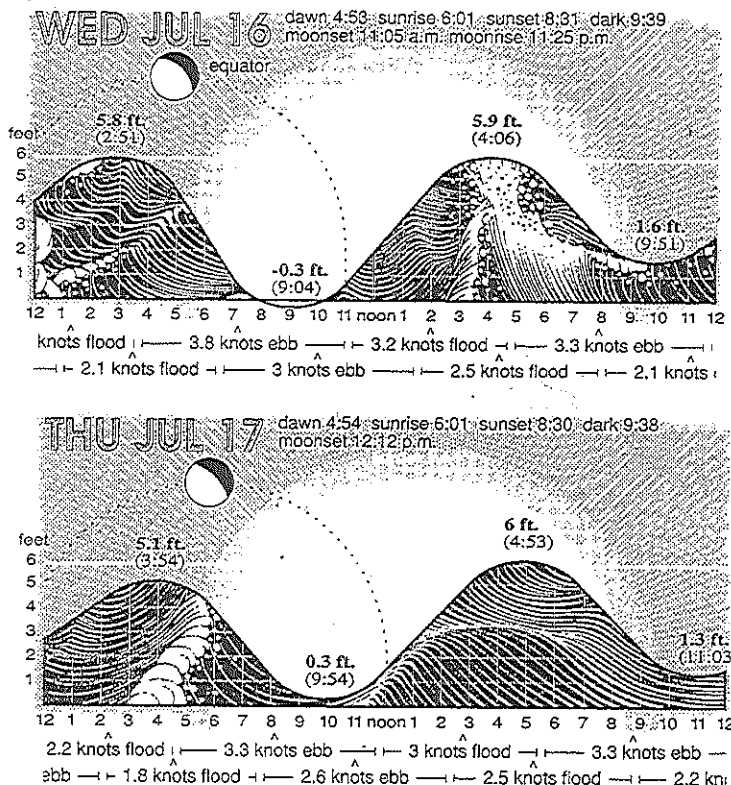

Actor Frances McDormand met filmmaker Joel Coen when she auditioned for the lead role in the 1984 film "Blood Simple." It was his first film with his brother Ethan, in which a cuckolded husband hires a hit man to kill his wife and her lover. Ms. McDormand wasn't trained for film and she struggled to decipher some cues in the script; she read a few scenes in a windowless room while the brothers chain-smoked. Later, she asked them to reschedule her call-back so she could watch her then-boyfriend in a soap opera gig.

It was the unlikely start of what is now a 30-year marriage. The couple has lived in Bolinas for half that time, and gave a rare joint interview before a packed house on Sunday at The New School at Commonweal. Eric Karpeles moderated the informal conversation, titled "Adventures in Collaboration."

The Coen brothers, who write, produce and direct together, have garnered mainstream recognition for their unique signature of violence, humor and carefully scripted language. Still, Mr. Coen does

PUBLIC NOTICE FIREHOUSE COMMUNITY PARK AGENCY MESA PARK BOARD OF DIRECTORS SEAT OPENINGS

The November 4, 2014 election will include 3 regular 4-year-term seats on the Mesa Park (AKA: Firehouse Community Park Agency) Board of Directors which are up for election in November.

This governing agency oversees the maintenance and supervision of the recreational parks located on Wharf Road in downtown Bolinas and on Mesa Road adjacent to the firehouse and clinic.

The agency is seeking board members who are interested in keeping the recreational areas of Bolinas safe and in good condition to offer recreation and play to all members of the public.

Board meetings take place one evening per month. The positions offer opportunities to set policy for the use of the parks, to participate in local government, and to provide an important community service. No prior experience on elected boards is required.

Candidates shall be registered voters and must subscribe to the Oath of Office in order to serve on the Board.

Registration for nomination takes place at the County of Marin Registrar of Voters division at the Civic Center (telephone: 415-499-6456).

"I realized what independence means while in a penal colony: the ability to remain faithful to principles in a situation where, having taken a stand for independence, everything leads to the fact that one almost certainly will lose. But the person capable of independence loses only in the short term. Generally, in the long term, he wins. It is just such a person who makes history. When you decide to behave in one way or another, you can turn out to be a role model for others. Suffragettes, Soviet dissidents, Ai Weiwei and the Apostle Paul—these people all inspire me. But independence is not always as beautiful as it is portrayed in Hollywood films. I know women who even now, while we are reading at breakfast, are sitting in their cells, pale and mottled with scars. Independence—this is not a fact handed down from above but a process. Independence can bring pain, but it is worth it."

Vaccines proven to be safe

A new analysis of 166 studies on childhood vaccines has come to a resoundingly clear conclusion: Vaccination does not cause autism and is extremely safe and effective. The Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality commissioned a systematic review on the subject in response to the rise of the anti-vaccine movement, which has been blamed for recent outbreaks of measles and whooping cough across the country. Researchers looked at dozens of the most scientifically rigorous studies on vaccinations conducted since a similarly comprehensive 2011 review. They found no link between the measles vaccine and autism; in fact, children who did not receive the vaccine had the same incidence of autism as kids who did. "Adverse effects" from vaccination do occur—including fever-related seizures and intestinal blockages—but the study found these reactions were "extremely rare" and treatable. Clearly, the authors wrote, the benefits of vaccination far outweigh the tiny risk of side effects. The childhood diseases vaccinations prevent, they pointed out, can cause "blindness, deafness, developmental delay, epilepsy, or paralysis and may also result in death."

The benefits of vaccines far outweigh the risks.
"There is a lot of misinformation out there," co-author Margaret Maglione tells USA Today. "Anyone can put anything on the Internet."
