David Chase Franklin
12/31/61-7/29/14

David died last night at St. Mary's Hospital in SF. His reoccurring seizures and infections were increasing rapidly. Each round set him back further and it was time to enlist comfort care. So his death was indeed peaceful and relatively swift.

When he was stricken 3 years ago so many people came up to me on the street with sweet anecdotes and reports of how helpful, charming, brilliant and eccentric David was. His walking figure all over the Mesa was like a landmark, with dreadlocks up top, those strong legs in cutoffs below, often barefoot.

He had a difficult life, often in disarray and bedeviled by alcohol, drugs, and undiagnosed mental illness. But at heart he was generous and gentle. When he became brain damaged but sober, I got to experience those aspects of his pure soul, unclouded at last, and we had deep communion on our walks out at Commonweal. His 6-month tenancy at Sam's House made this possible. Then it became dicey and we moved him to a board and care in SF where they took very good care of him but he had a limited life.

David had a very strong life force. He almost died many times after that first devastating seizure but defied all odds, breathing, swallowing and then walking on his own. Towards the end his conversation was very limited in scope, but he always remarked how good I looked, how glad he was that his sister Melia was doing well, and what a bummer it was that John had died.

I sat with him from Friday afternoon to Monday evening, going home every night to recharge. I witnessed how tenderly and respectfully he was tended. I got a chance to do a lot of reading. But I was getting just a tad impatient with the process and he must have sensed it, because he died that midnight after I'd gone home earlier than usual.

We often worried that bringing him up in the loose, drug-filled milieu of Bolinas might have contributed to his condition. But then I recognized how this town loved David and who knows where he would have ended up in a cold city.

So farewell, David. May your trickster spirit flourish elsewhere, unfettered by time, space, and the anchors of "reality."

Bolinas residents answer call to arms, join border militias ...? Has Bolinas gone Tea Party? That’s what one nationally known uber-conservative seems to think—as Free Republic Founder Jim Robinson claimed recently that residents of the quirky beachfront enclave had enlisted in the ranks of the Texas border militias on the patrol for illegals. Robinson, writing on the Free Republic website last week about “defend[ing] the border” to “protest Obama’s lawless open borders policies,” name-checked the hippy-ish coastal community in his fight to protect America from, if recent headlines are any indication, thousands of desperate children fleeing poverty in the Hispanic third world.

“We have independent units from the Bolinas Border Patrol (BBP) and the Central Valley Citizens militia joining forces with independent citizens militia units of Texas to defend our southern border in Texas,” boasted Robinson. Robinson, who founded the Free Republic internet forum in 1997, and has become a Tea Party muckraker of sorts, might seem a strange bedfellow to be linked with the BBP.

The Bolinas Border Patrol, of course, is the tongue-in-cheek name of the residents who tear down the road signs leading to Bolinas, in a longstanding custom of warding off outsiders from the eccentrically self-aware West Marin town.

“The invasion is happening now,” Robinson added. “Action must be taken NOW!”

It was unclear at press time whether Robinson intended to return the favor, and join forces with his Bolinas compatriots in next year’s Fourth of July tug-of-war against the invaders from Stinson Beach.—Jason Walsh

LAST CHANCE FOR SCHOOL SURVEY

The school bond measure community survey results are being tallied this week in preparation for the August 5 school board meeting. The more responses, the greater the community input, so everyone is encouraged to take the survey in the next couple of days. The school phone number is 868-1603 for more information.

The school was last rebuilt in 1980, so it’s coming up on 35 years since any major improvements have been made. We could use science, tech, visual and performing arts and classroom upgrades. We are also looking at the future and the impact that global warming has on building location, and access and egress. Sea rise predictions are minimum over the next decades, but any small climate related sea change causes major storms and related surges and flooding. We must plan for that.

Warren Weber’s Star Route Farms property surrounding the Bolinas Campas is for sale. The school participation in purchase of this land by the community, including our organic farmers, would benefit our town, and our school. We have an excellent outdoor science lab developing at school and this would allow expansion of that, beyond our k-8 program. We will be discussing this in depth at the August 5th School Board meeting at the Bolinas Campus. We need to hear from you.

The award-winning writer brings these two lenses of knowledge together in Braiding Sweetgrass.

“Who is there to visit in New York anyway? Everybody’s moved to Bolinas…”

PHILIP WHALEN
Quoted in ON THE MESA (1971)

after her

JOYCE MAYNARD

He wanted to stop at Stinson Beach to look at the ocean, though I could see when we got there that this visit would be harder for him than he’d anticipated. Still, we got out of the car and made our way up the path and onto the sand. He didn’t ask, but I bent down to untie his shoes for him. I knew he’d want to be barefoot.

We passed Bolinas, the town where the citizens kept taking down the road sign to keep the tourists out.

“Hippie town here,” he said. “The women there don’t seem to shave their armpits. No argument from me there, you understand. Every woman needs to claim her own style of beauty. It’s my curse to love them all.”
