Far West Fest Round Up

by StuArt

Love Field was once again the site of the 8th annual Far West Fest. The weather was similar to last year - overcast in the morning, clearing to sun during the day and in the late afternoon fog rolling back in over the Inverness ridge.

Sofi Rox invited me to open the festival by singing some of my Bolinas songs on the acoustic stage. As soon as I began to sing a funk band started a sound check on one of the main stages. As I tried to voice a tender ballad a trombone or saxophone would blare from across the field. I found the distraction to be jarring at first, but then I saw the humor in the cacophony.

After all Love Field is a baseball field and to chatter (verbally taunt or distract the opposing batter) is part of baseball. Fans and players alike participate in chatter. "Heybattabbattabatta" is an example. The blat of a trombone might be appropriate chatter for a music festival.

The fortune wheel was near the kid's zone. Albert was set up beside me with his feathered medicine wands on a ground cloth. He looked like a native shaman wearing his hand sewn goatskin shirt bedecked with feathers and beads. Across the field we watched a dust devil, a mini tornado, sweep through the vendors' row and blow pop-up tents twenty feet into the air.

"This is Miwok ceremonial ground," Albert commented. I felt safe and secure with medicine wands nearby.

Meanwhile I was busy with the fortune wheel. Even though I've simplified the process, running the fortune wheel still requires a lot of psychic energy. A number of people returned from previous years to tell me how much their fortunes had meant to them.

Over the years I've tried to eliminate any negativity from the fortunes. But sometimes totally cryptic answers appear. For instance, when Dylan Squires spun he got "Dissolve the King."

GRATEFUL LIVING
HOME AND LAND MEDITATION

Just as we take care of our friends and families, our homes and Mother Earth take care of us. Our homes give us a place of refuge—a sanctuary that stands between us and the elements of nature and the rest of the world. The earth is an unselfish giver of life and the steward of our physical and spiritual needs. Her bountiful plant life nourishes us, gives us air, and offers us cooling shade. Her waters quench our thirst, and her beauty stirs our souls.

Yet it is easy to take both of these wonderful sources of blessings for granted. Expressing the gratitude you feel toward your home and the earth for what each provides can help you stay conscious of where many of the gifts in your life come from. Each time you give thanks, you will be reminded of the importance of caring for your home and for Mother Earth. There is a simple and beautiful meditation you can perform to show your gratitude.

Begin by finding a quiet place where you can be alone. Sit comfortably and breathe deeply until you feel relaxed, and then read the following out loud:

"Thank you, home, for allowing me to live within your walls. Thank you for giving me shelter, warmth, and security. Thank you for allowing me to live my life in your womb, for staying strong and sturdy, for supporting me, and for your beauty.

"Thank you, Earth, for the land that I live on and for allowing me to steward life with you. Thank you for allowing me to walk upon your soil, cultivate you, and live in partnership with you. Thank you for supporting my home and my family.

"Thank you, plants, minerals, and animals that dwell on the land that I steward. Thank you for allowing me to experience your beauty and share in the wonderment of life and for the honor of living with all of you on this earth. Thank you for the wisdom and joy you bring to humanity.

"I honor you."

You can perform this meditation as often as you like and anytime you feel particularly thankful for the many blessings that you have received. Each time you do, you will reaffirm and strengthen your connection with all that protects, supports, and sustains you.

He asked me what it meant. I had no idea. When I compose fortunes I often seize whatever is close at hand, phrases from books I've been reading, magazines, the Internet. I trust synchronicity to furnish fortunes.

I told Dylan that I didn't know the meaning and suggested he spin again for another fortune that was easier to understand.

"I'm a Leo, and I'm going to think about this fortune." Dylan told me. I had to admire him for that. Real fortunes are often abstruse, like the Oracle of Delphi, and require deep reflection to unlock their meanings.

Towards the end of the day I noticed an unopened fortune lying on the ground. That fortune must be for me, I thought. I picked it up and opened it.

"Dance!" it read.

"Yes sir!" I answered, and I grabbed Coyote Peace Puppet and headed over to dance to the music.

Silver Quest

The whole story started April 2002 when Silver spoke in the name of Bolinas residents who were losing their properties, allegedly due to false delinquency. In retaliation for speaking truth to power, for questioning their authority the county officials violated Constitutional/Civil rights including ethnic discrimination, speech association. Within days, Silver's property in Bolinas was fraudulently deemed delinquent and 33 of other violations of Federal and State Laws including perjury extortion, fraud, assault, battery, threats to life ensued and continue until now. The Marin County Board of Supervisors and Supervisors individually were informed about the violations since July 2007, last time, May 8, 2013, they took no constructive action, did not help but abated and accompliced the violators: Former Tax Collector/Treasurer, Public Administrator, Registrar of Voters, County Clerk, Michael J. Smith, His successor, Roy Given, Liz Clark, and other 12 Civil Servants from the Civic Center. Lawyers Silver has talked to have advised him to make it a Class Action suit.

Please call if you have any other question, as this has to do with ALL of us! Phone number: 510 525 0479 As the court date for SETTLEMENT CONFERENCE is on Friday, Aug. 9th at 1:30, Dept./Courtroom E, the Superior Court at Marin Civic Center. Press conference after the 1:30 session at the entrance to the court. Public and Media presence highly encouraged and appreciated.

PLEASE publish this as it has everything to do with Bolinas and The People's Constitutional Rights!!!! Thank-you so much for your help, we are grateful.

Warmly, Tadeusz Wyrzykowski aka Silver

Have you seen this dog? He came up from behind and bit the back of my thigh! on Monday afternoon by the park and grocery store. He came down from the Little Mesa, near Altura and Crescente Ave.

Black with some white markings, knee-high, short-haired, lean but large square jaw & head, long up-curved tail, maybe lavender cloth collar.

I want to contact the owners to inform them of the "secret life" of their pet.

Any information appreciated.

CHARGED WITH SEDITION

C. D. Besenty, Anachronist

Ah, summer in Bolinas. If the fog licking your ears has you dreaming of more salubrious climes, may I recommend a light tome of desert travel to warm the soul?

California Desert Trails (1919) written by the late J. Smeaton Chase (born in London, 1864-passed in Banning, CA, 1923) is an almost lyrical and wholly engaging travel guide to the flora, fauna, geology and history of the Colorado desert of Southern California, before the era of freeway and air conditioning.

Part desert primer, part adventure tale, we join Smeaton and his trusty steed Kaweah on a series of treks over old desert trails, sometimes solo, sometimes in the company of others. There are, at pleasing intervals, narrow escapes from flash floods and dehydration, spectacular sunrises, alkaline waterholes, abundant agriculture, hermits, hidden canyons and badlands, mining speculators, overbearing heat, beautiful oasis surrounded by palms, cemeteries – all bracketed by random philosophizing largely in tune with modern sensibilities.

Never pedantic (as are most of the other travel guides of the era), he writes with verve and yet still informs. For example, our local artists will appreciate his keen eye for color -- his concise descriptions and explanations of the desert palette and geologic forms are most instructive, yet he does not belabor the topic in ways that a casual reader would find tiresome. His work is also refreshingly non-patronizing – he is generous with admiration and affection for the native tribes, families, and wanderers of the region, again, in contrast with many of his contemporaries. Finally, the author’s self-deprecating jocularly serves to ‘keep things moving’ in a way that only a native of Britain lost in the desert could possibly hope to achieve.

I am confident this work will earn a treasured place in your library, if for no other reason than the endearing impression the author quietly conveys of himself throughout the book. For – truly -- who among us can withhold affection for one proudly bearing the name ‘Smeaton?’

California Desert Trails is freely available online in a variety of formats, suitable for loading into a tablet reader or desktop. Visit our friends at The Archive to obtain your copy:

"Mirror, Mirror, on the wall"

Friday Hearsay Editor Jeffrey Manson has organized an art exhibit at the Farmstand featuring his own work and including contributions from Hearsay staff and a couple of his friends. Paintings figure prominently in the show.

Normally I also would contribute paintings. Instead I decided to show mirrors that I've collected from the Freebox. I stencilled a woman's face on each of the four mirrors, and I've had them hanging around the Gibson House for a while.

A few months ago I had a vision and saw the mirrors hanging at the Farmstand. When Jeffrey invited me to participate in the show I saw an opportunity to fulfill that vision. However I was concerned that the mirrors would appear too simple and decorative to be considered fine art. A friend even suggested that I substitute paintings for some of the mirrors. But I persisted with my vision.

On Monday morning when I took the mirrors to the Farmstand the walls were still empty. I asked Jeffrey to pose for me and I photographed him reflected in a couple of the mirrors. I knew I was onto something when I saw the face in the mirror superimposed on Jeffrey's reflection. There was something mystical about the imagery.

I'm excited about the possibilities.

"Mirror, mirror, on the wall."

Thank you, Jeffrey.
