LONG TERM EFFECTS

Back by Popular Demand

Live at the Coast Cafe, 6:00ish, September 25

(The band pictured on the left is not Long Term Effects. This band played last month and were not invited back. There is no room for shrubbery at the Coast Cafe)

Long Term Effects will be playing:

1. Arias di sorbetto for your dessert dining pleasure, which will follow the basso profundo main dish fish course, during which we play style con sardino.
2. Concerto grosso played con gusto, (so please cover ears of any attending children during that portion of the program.)

All selections will be played in our usual style of pizzicata, similar to bodacious frittata style, only mas con amore.

David will play a conundrum (percussion instrument favored by Conan the Barbarian.) Sharyle will play a choice selection from among the 88 keys on a keyboard. Both have strong opinions about humming along.

THIS NEW PLAGUE VINE

Where is Bolinas famous cooperative spirit?

Let us get together to lift the curse of this, plague this terrible, climbing, creeping vine? We can see it, every day climbing higher, every day enveloping more, of the great Eucalyptus trees that line the Mesa hill entrance to Bolinas streets!

We can see it is claiming the life of these beautiful trees. Even now invading the rest of the trees that lead to Bolinas Center?

What will it take for us to face this new threat to our lives?

We can paint and put up some signs,

We can print and pass out leaflets proposing to pull down, shred, and eradicate this curse on our lives. We can come with machetes, ropes, and our strong arms, park at firehouse park and walk the few steps to the first trees. Let us take heart, together we can lift this curse, a few trees at a time. WE DON'T HAVE TO SUBMIT!

Sierra Club Yodeler Events and Activities Supplement October-November 2014

Club files suit to protect California coast

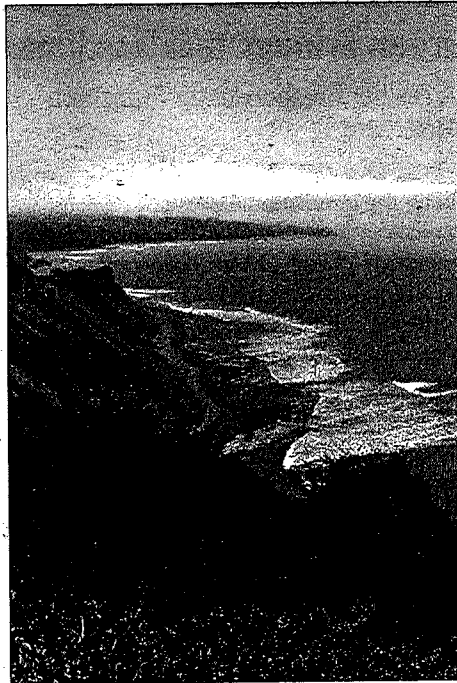

In 1976, the California Legislature enacted the Coastal Act, which created a mandate for coastal counties to manage the conservation and development of coastal resources through a comprehensive planning and regulatory program called the Local Coastal Program. New action in Marin County threatens to weaken these coastal protections, but the Sierra Club is fighting back.

Last month the Club filed legal action to challenge a dangerous amendment to Marin's Local Coastal Plan. The amendment was submitted by Marin County and approved by the Coastal Commission in May. If allowed to stand, Marin's amended Coastal Plan would substantially weaken environmental protections and set a precedent for poor process and lack of environmental review along the entire California coast. The result would be to open up our coastline to increased development and allowed uses without public process.

The Coastal Commission's approval of the Local Coastal Plan Amendment ignored five years of repeated warnings from the Sierra Club, other environmental groups, and even its own staff, that the document was in violation of the California Coastal Act.

The Coastal Commission's action could result in less environmental review and protection for coastal areas than in similar areas outside of coastal zones. This would create a confusing and unequal application of land use planning laws.

Marin's Local Coastal Plan update needs to be more protective of the environment than the original 1981 Plan—not less. The Sierra Club believes that if allowed to stand, the

Marin County amendment will set a statewide precedent and result in more inappropriate development and less environmental protection for California's sensitive coastal areas.

The Bay Chapter's Marin Group has set up a Marin Coastal Defense Fund to help protect and preserve our spectacular California coastline. For more information or to make a donation, visit the Group website at

Fall equinox! Stoked to have five high schoolers- Oscar, Treshon, Kaydon, Mikaela & Heidi waiting with us for the Bo school bus. Rose, July, Finn, Weston, Ely & Maitrella joined the group in the sunshine. Quick game of Ninja before our gratitude circle. Thanks for the beach, Tam's homecoming dance & great foreign accents were a few of the noted offerings. We missed Rudy from the Snack Bar but the soft serve ice cream with sprinkles tasted especially good on a warm afternoon. Kerry the librarian was back from camping. A delight being with her generous spirit again. Kids had tons of homework & everyone put nose to grindstone. We stopped at the market getting a few supplies for our hike up to Table Rock! Perfect conditions, epic views and a proper homage to the beginning of fall. Rose, July & Maitrella successfully walked a good chunk arm in arm, three astride. We shared stories in council of our favorite part of the weekend & passed a rock to state our intentions for the new season. Keeping up with school work, surfing, & being successful were a few of the shout outs named. The hike down was delayed by stunning vistas at every turn. Kids wanting to capture & pose for the ever growing important display in social media. Deep bow to The Parkside for pizza at the ready for the ravenous crew. Might be one of our last alfresco dinners for a while as we begin autumn. Bridget Bartholome and Ian MacLaird

Drought Threatening to Harm Research at Farallon

Monitoring seabirds, climate-change work affected

As you might imagine, life out on Southeast Farallon Island is pretty rustic for the half-dozen or so research scientists who live out there.

"We only shower every four days. There's a schedule," said Russ Bradley, the Farallon program manager and a senior scientist at Point Blue Conservation Science.

Story: Allison Hawkes // Bay Nature

Situated 27 miles offshore, the research station has to be largely self-sufficient. More than 90 percent of the power comes from solar panels.

The scientists also rely on rainwater for household use that is collected in a large cistern with a 100,000-gallon capacity. They use about 25,000 gallons a year, roughly one-quarter of the use of the average family home. Gray water is collected, filtered and used in toilets.

California's drought is certainly not making life easier. In fact, another year of mealy rains could shut down the research station, Bradley said.

"The rains we got in February helped us get back to the bottom end of where we'd be comfortable with. It's lower than where we wanted to be," Bradley said. "But in January, it was pretty scary in not being able to collect significant water at all."

The dependence on rainwater is not a new thing. In the late 1800s, commercial harvesters of murre eggs sustained their operation from rainwater collection, and a foghorn relied on cistern water to cool its coal-fueled boilers.

When the Coast Guard took over in the mid-20th century, it shipped water out to the island and temporarily ended the reliance on what fell from the skies. Scientists went back to collecting rainwater after the Coast Guard stopped delivering fresh water in the late 1990s.

But Bradley said he has not seen water levels this low in a decade, and there are not a lot of alternatives to what nature brings.

"The prospect of having to move all our water onto the island — it would be difficult to think we could sustain our operations out there if we didn't have the water that we collect."

The researchers monitor the largest seabird colony in the contiguous U.S. (more than 300,000 birds of 13 species) as well as five species of pinnipeds and an accompanying swarm of white sharks and other species. They are also collecting long-term data on climate change and its effects on the marine ecosystem.

"We have been conducting research and monitoring efforts on the Farallon Islands every day since April of 1968 — that's 46 years of continuous effort," said Bradley, noting that the research team has "some of the longest-term data sets on wildlife in the world — disrupting that could have major negative implications." And, by the way, the humans there are not the only ones affected by the drought. The growth in vegetation is about six weeks behind schedule, and that affects breeding birds.

Lasthenia, commonly called maritime goldfields or the Farallon weed, is a primary nesting material for western gulls and Brandt's cormorants.

"We have some of that coming back now, which is great," he said. "But we don't really know what the effects are going to be with the reduced availability of nesting material. The birds really count on this to build their nests."

Also, an endemic salamander, the Farallon arboreal salamander, emerged three to four months later than normal, Bradley said.

Bolinas Community Center Board of Directors Meeting
August 16th 2014 St Aidens Church
10am

Directors and Staff Present: StuArt - President, Steve Wrenn, Lia Kourula-Sabbatini - General Manager, Randi Arnold - Development Director, Ayn Plant, Stacy Besenty - Secretary, Susie Stewart, Jan Broek, Sooze Mills, Chris Besenty.

President's Report: StuArt acknowledged that Labor Day was coming up and the fine effort that everyone was putting in to prepare for the big day. He also made note of how important the Labor Day event was and how it symbolized the Heart of Bolinas in so many ways.

Treasurer's Report: There wasn't too much to report with the finances; the numbers were good for this time of year and holding their own going into Labor Day. A reminder was made as to how important Labor Day is to the Operating Account and the general operation of the Center.

Manager's Report: Lia announced that we had received $1000.00 for the Village and Beach Fund from an anonymous donor. And then she jumped right into: Labor Day!

Labor Day is coming together, the music and photo booth are lined up, and permanent banners were ordered and had been delivered. The banners are beautiful and will title all of the different areas: BBQ, Desserts, Membership Table, etc. So now there will be no need to re-make signs at every event.

Chris is going to head up the grill area. Steaming trays have been purchased to re-warm if necessary and to cook hot dogs in. Extra servers and grillers are needed, Chris will begin lining people up to help.

Sunday from 9:30-1 the chop will begin. Helpers are advised to bring chopping board, apron and knife.

All of the different donated foods are already starting to come in. Zoro is going to be doing the sound with Omar giving him a hand and possibly bringing Soul Doc in. Steve Hodge manages the stage, sets up and tears down. James Fox will be managing the bar. We need someone to get the tables from BPUD for the kid's corner. June is organizing the Dessert Table. Arn and Carmen are making tamales. Jan will be picking up beer. Steve will pick up chicken.

We are going to be working with the Conservation Corps, Smart Trash, to educate people on the best way to recycle. They will come with a team of three and take care of all of the garbage needs during the event. Information on this will be sent to the Hearsay ahead of time.

Jan is treating the floor next week, advising us now that next year it will need to be sanded along with its general yearly sprucing up. Classes will be cancelled through Wednesday this week. It was suggested that we even go till Thursday to let the floors completely dry, if this is necessary we can hold the food bank outside.

The health inspection went through with flying colors in the kitchen! So we are almost ready for the final inspection.

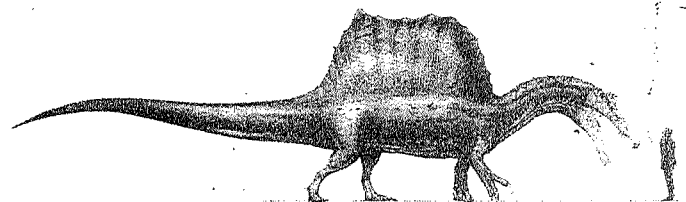

We have an idea on how to replace the screen door on the back of the kitchen with something that will work better than what we have at the moment.

A fan needs to be put in the men's room.

We are currently looking for kitchen renters.

Dietmar put electric in the old shed, so there will be a working freezer in there now along with a light!

Director's Report: Let everyone know about Serita's move and expressed how much we will miss her personally and her involvement with the board.
