'Oh, no. Aliens, bio-duplication, nude conspiracies. Oh, my God, Lyndon LaRouche was right!' —Homer Simpson

IN BOLINAS

Cabrillo and Ferrer, Portuguese and Catalan
In 1542, following the California coast
Touched at what would be San Diego and Santa Barbara
And were told by the natives there of other Spaniards
With armor and horses, lances and killings,
On the distant side of the mountains to the East:
Coronado's expedition, hundreds of miles inland.

That is how I hear of our tragedy.
People on the street say they see you
With someone else, dark-haired, tall, manly,
A minute before I go by, and I avoid windows
Afraid not of guns, but of seeing you,
The you I know, who, curious, cannot stop —
Who follows the tracks of quails in the fog.

And so we learn from one another's passage;
Sometimes I ask how much longer I can love you —
Then I return to my simple bed, and hope
That somehow, in these epiphanies, you will Find the moment you seek, the golden thread
That leads you to the place where longing begins.
From birdsongs heard in Bolinas I refined this poem.

ANNUAL COASTAL CLEANUP DAY!Saturday Sept 17th*End of Brighton - 9am till Noon

We invite you to join a world wide event this Saturday by walking the beach and collecting garbage! This garbage is then separated into land-fill and recyclable, counted, weighed, and turned into valuable data that can then be used in many different and helpful ways. This clean-up is fun, easy, and scientifically important. So come on down to the end of Brighton Saturday morning and help collect trash off our beach and help the world at the same time. Bring your own gloves and bucket if you can; if not, we'll provide what you need.

The End of Growth: Adapting to Our New Economic Reality

Economics has failed us . . . but there is life after growth! Richard Heinberg's latest book, The End of Growth, proposes a startling diagnosis: humanity has reached a fundamental turning point in its economic history. In conversation with Michael Lerner, Richard explores the ongoing financial crisis—explaining how and why it occurred; what we must do to avert the worst potential outcomes; and what policy makers, communities, and families can do to build a new economy that operates within Earth's budget of energy and resources.

Richard Heinberg is the author of ten books—including The Party's Over, Peak Everything, and the soon-to-be-released The End of Growth—and a senior fellow-in-residence at Post Carbon Institute.

Co-presented with the Post Carbon Institute, Point Reyes Books, the Regenerative Design Institute, Transition West Marin, and the Mainstreet Moms.

PRIMO SINGERS FEATURED IN "DEJA VU" MUSICAL SHOW

Here is some background on the fine singers I am proud to have performing in my new musical revue "Deja Vu"—playing this Friday, Sept. 16, 8 p.m. at the Community Center.

Rana Kangas-Kent has sung in six of the Mt. Tamalpais Mountain Plays, playing leading roles in three: Annie, Oklahoma, and Hair. She was the lead vocalist in the long-running San Francisco musical "Shopping" for a year and a half. She is a lead singer in Gibson House Murder Mysteries (a murder mystery dinner theater) and in Chaucer Theater Company (doing The Canterbury Tales), and has been in two S.F. Playhouse productions.

Matt Kizer has sung lead roles in two Mountain Plays, A Funny Thing and West Side Story, in three productions of San Jose's American Musical Theater, and in Marin Theater Company's production of Wonderful Town.

Ellen St. Thomas has sung leading roles (for instance, in La Boheme and Don Giovanni) for West Bay Opera and San Francisco Lyric Opera, has been a soloist with many Bay Area choruses, and is co-founder of Berkeley's Open Opera and directs their productions.

TODAY'S HEARSAY brought to you by :
Steve Heilig, June McAdams, David Cattell

Let's Get the Park Finished

I am happy that the Park is moving forward on its next phase. This is too unique of an opportunity to let fighting and name calling distract the community from working together for the next generation.

It is my understanding that the Eucalyptus grove above the park is unstable because the trees have grown too tall. To do nothing would be asking for a judgment against the park and BCPUD in a future lawsuit.

Instead, the recommendation is to maintain the root structure of these trees by cutting them to a level where the stumps will still live, continuing to suck up water and also allowing light in encouraging newly planted and existing oak trees take over the hillside.

Having a local crew, like the Oakanders and the Downtown Park volunteers, is a huge benefit because they care about the outcome and our community. An out of town crew might just "get the job done" and not care about the particular concerns of the neighbors and the community.

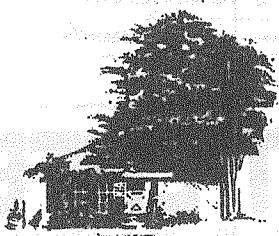

It is good to remember why this acre is called Burnt Park. It was a commercial restaurant site that burned down, then neglected for decades. It is quite extraordinary the amount of work that has been done to make this site ready to become a common area that the Downtown lacks (at least at high tide) in my opinion.

Thank you Downtown Park volunteers, the Mesa Park Board and all of the contributors, including the very generous donation of the site.

THREE LITTLE FLASHBACKS (- triggered by recent events)

911 (2001)

A day after the awful events, a sign was up at the Community Center announcing "Mozart's 'Requiem' - 11am". A few folks were downtown that morning, not many, but everybody seemed dazed. Inside, Bill Quist had rolled out the somewhat rickety BCC upright piano. People filed in and sat in the chairs, and he began to play. Slowly, mournfully, beautifully. Before long, I heard sniffles; snuck peeks around, and saw people wiping their eyes. Soon, I joined them.

No words; just the most appropriate music and response I witnessed or heard of, anywhere.

Labor Day (c.2004?)

Sunny Labor Day downtown party; got a plate of food and looked around for a seat to eat at; there on a bench were Arthur Okamura and Ken Botto. I joined them. Arthur was drawing, of course. I leaned over to check his work and Buddy the sneaky yellow lab came up behind and snarfed my plate of food right off the table. "Good work Buddy!" laughed Ken. Nancy McDonald walked up, looked at Buddy licking the last molecule of food off the paper plate, and laughed too. "Let's take a collection for another lunch" said Arthur. "Good idea!" Nancy agreed. "You don't have to do that", I demurred, trying to be polite. "No, not for you - we want to see Buddy do that again", Ken replied.

I miss all those good people.
(Buddy still toddles 'round the Mesa, seeking food to snatch)

Full Moon (c.2007?)

"Yang Gang": No 'self-empowerment' stuff here, just a good lunar time. Late at night, a bunch of males out on beach, with drums and such. I pulled a stinky 'presto-log' thingee out of car and bring it along. Big moon rising over lagoon/Seadrift. Tide rising too. StuArt starts the chant and we all get very into it. Too into it, maybe - the burning log falls into the water off the shrinking beach; we realize there might not be a way off the sand in either direction and make a run for it.

Everybody gets a little soaked, but it's worth it.

- Steve Heilig

INNER WOMAN is an original play written by Jerrund Bojeste. The story is about a woman's journey to find a mate. Although she tries the right strategies and dating services, she muddles along between disappointment, despair. . . mirth and joy. Her Inner woman awakes, giving her new horizons to conquer! Sex is a flavor. . . Love is life. A forum of actors and actresses has journeyed to the destination of imagination. The rose -hips of Bolinas and a twinkling of distant stars, are poised to take you on a flight to the Inner Woman of your soul. . .

BOLINAS STINSON LIBRARY $1200.00
GRANT OPPORTUNITY

DUE DATE OCTOBER 1

Pick up your application at all our West Marin libraries

The Bolinas-Stinson Beach Library Improvement Society (BSBLIS) has just announced the inauguration of a special grant program with a specific focus on the literary, educational, and literacy enhancement of the Bolinas-Stinson Beach communities. The grants will be awarded twice yearly (once in 2011), a maximum of six in each application period, $1200.00 being the maximum award amount to each grantee. The applicant does not have to reside in Bolinas or Stinson Beach; however the thrust of the application must indicate a positive endeavor favoring the Stinson-Bolinas communities while benefits of the grant can extend to other West Marin communities. Applications for the grant are at the Bolinas and Stinson Beach libraries; instructions for submission accompany each application.

The board is grateful to the year-round communities of Bolinas and Stinson Beach as well as many second and third home-owners (some who live as far away as Maine, Minnesota, and Iowa) for their continuing contributions that make this grant a reality. Our hope is that our grant program will encourage even more generosity, specifically toward these awards, over the next years. An extraordinarily generous gift from a local benefactor made the initial concept for this project possible.

After some success and failure in business in the 1960s, I knew that work would be the death of me. It turns out we have the tools to choose between a life of work and a life of freedom. To choose work we must give up most of our freedom, but choosing freedom is more demanding: it requires profound self-examination and limiting material desires lest we set out on the wrong course. Keen observation of others is also essential to the seeker of freedom. For instance, he will ask himself: Were his parents and grandparents happy? Which desires did they, in hindsight, deem fulfilled?

I once heard a retired man say he'd "seen it all" as a plumbing supply wholesaler. I thought that was terrifying.

Rabid Dog Briefly Mistaken for Tea Party Candidate

Receives Standing Ovation at Missouri Rally

Gwendolene Thomason, 42, a Tea Party supporter from Jefferson City, was one of the hundreds on hand who were convinced that the Doberman was a Tea Party candidate until he was outed as a dog.

"I liked what he had to say," she said. "He reminded me of Glenn Beck, only furrer."

The Doberman's canine identity finally became clear when he lunged at a man in the front row and wrested a hamburger from his right hand, taking two of the man's fingers with it.

While the discovery that Mister Buster was not a Tea Party candidate disappointed many in attendance, Ms. Thomason held out hope that, dog or no, he might consider running for office at some point.

"I liked the way he bit off that guy's hand, and the way he did his business in the middle of the stage," she said. "We need more of that in Washington."

Bobolicious weds health to flavor

In Bolinas, a town long endeared for its love of chilled beverages, one woman with a blender is pioneering new ground. Through her new shop, Bobolicious Smoothie Lounge, which opened last October, local dietician Julie Augustyn is using frozen fruit and her extensive knowledge of food combining to create healthy, flavorful blended drinks in a trendy downtown environment.

Augustyn, a native of New Jersey who first moved to Bolinas years ago, describes her current venture as the perfect combination of art and science. "As a dietician, I promote food first," she said. And by the steady flow of customers on a recent weekday morning, so does her community.

"Wood Glue—It's a good one," said one young customer named Thor, who was wearing a backwards baseball hat. He had come to pick up a smoothie for his friend's mother, who was recovering from oral surgery.

Wood Glue, a curious and mouth-watering concoction of coconut water, pineapple, acacia fiber and maca root, is but one of the many refreshing and playfully titled smoothie varieties available nowhere other than at Bobolicious.

Augustyn said she got the idea for the business years ago, while in college, but doubted it would ever come to fruition. Early last year she noticed a "For Rent" sign downtown, on a space that is owned and managed by the Bolinas Community Land Trust. "As soon as I saw that I thought, 'If I don't give it a go now, I'll never know,'" Augustyn pitched her idea to the trust, and the shop was approved for development.

With help from a local architect and cabinet maker, who each donated their services pro bono, Augustyn was able to get Bobolicious up and running in just over nine months. "In fact, it's been very much like having a baby," she said. "For the first few months we were busy just learning about the business and its quirks and trying to meet the community needs as they fit within the confines of health and safety regulations."

So far, despite the requisite obstacle of "learning the ebb and flow of weather and tourists in a small town," feedback has been abundantly positive.

"I don't necessarily look at it from a want-to-own-my-own-business perspective," said Augustyn, who had previously been commuting daily to San Francisco, where she worked at a hospital. "But more from an I-want-to-be-a-bigger-part-of-my-community perspective."
— Jeremy Blackman

Bobolicious is open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, and from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. all other days.

Major, entered by J. R. Gallagher, was the Grand Champion Bull of the 1923 Western Sonoma-Marin Dairy Cattle Show.
